IN THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS OF CLEARFIELD COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

MARY HEITZENRATER, Plaintiff, vs. KEITH L. ZELIGER, D.O. and DUBOIS REGIONAL MEDICAL CENTER, Defendant.	)	CIVIL DIVISION No.

COMPLAINT IN CIVIL ACTION

AND NOW, comes the Plaintiff, Mary Heitzenrater, by and through her attorney, Kathleen A. Segmiller, Esquire, and files the within Complaint in Civil Action and avers as follows:

1. Plaintiff, Mary C. Heitzenrater, is an adult individual of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania residing at R.D. 5, Box 32, Punxsutawney, Jefferson County, Pennsylvania, 15217.

2. Defendant, Keith L. Zeliger, D.O., ("Defendant Zeliger") is an adult individual of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, maintaining his place of business at 211 Beaver Drive, DuBois, Clearfield County, Pennylvania. At all relevant times, Defendant Zeliger was licensed to practice medicine in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and a doctor/patient relationship existed between Plaintiff and himself.

3. Defendant, Dubois Regional Medical Center ("Defendant Medical Center") is a health care facility operated and maintained for the purpose of serving the health care needs of the general public, including the Plaintiff, and has its principal place of business at Maple Avenue, DuBois, Clearfield County, Pennsylvania, 15801.

4. On or about February 11, 2000, Plaintiff had electrodiagnostic studies performed on her left hand and arm for pain and diminished sensation which would occasionally awaken her at night. It was concluded that the Plaintiff was experiencing entrapment of the left median nerve in the region of the left carpal tunnel of a moderate to severe degree.

5. Plaintiff was referred to Keith Zeliger, D.O. for carpal tunnel syndrome of her left hand.

6. On or about April 27, 2000, Plaintiff was admitted to Defendant Medical Center for decompression of her left median nerve to be performed by Defendant Zeliger.

8. On or about August 23, 2000, a second electrodiagnostic evaluation was completed. The study noted a distal latency of the motor portion of the left median nerve. It was at the upper limits of normal and no response could be stimulated in the sensory portion of the left median nerve.

9. In comparison with the previous electrodiagnostic testing of February 11, 2000, the test represented a worsening of the left mediann neuropathy.

10. On or about September 29, 2000, a second surgical treatment was performed on the patient's left hand by another physician. Pre-operative diagnosis was transection of the common

11. The post-operative diagnosis was neuroma incontinuity of the median nerve to the left likely involving the fibers to the index finger. The operation was titled exploration of the median nerve, neurolysis, posterior interosseous nerve graph bypass interpositioning for the median nerve transected fibers.

12. At all times material and relevant, the recovery room and operating rooms at Defendant Medical Center were staffed by agents, servants and/or employees of Defendant Medical Center acting in the course and scope of their employment of their agency, authority or employment and in furtherance of Defendant Medical Center's business interest.

13. At all times material and relevant, Defendant Medical Center held out to Plaintiff, the operating room personnel and Defendant Zeliger as agents, servants and/or employees of Defendant Medical Center.

14. At all times material and relevant, Defendant Zeliger held himself out to the Plaintiff and to the general public as a highly skilled surgeon with extensive training and practical experience in the field of surgery, generally, and specifically in the field of carpal tunnel syndrome.

COUNT I - NEGLIGENCE

Plaintiff vs. Defendant Zeliger

15. The averments of Paragraphs 1-15 are incorporated herein by reference thereto as though fully set forth herein.

16. Defendant Zeliger, as a licensed physician, owe Plaintiff a duty to use reasonable care and to use such knowledge, skill and care as necessary for the proper treatment of Plaintiff consistent with accepted medical practice.

17. Defendant Zeliger breached that duty as follows:

a. In injuring Plaintiff's left median nerve at the time of the April 27, 2000 operative procedure;

b. In injuring several of the fascicles of the left median nerve in the area of her left carpal tunnel;

c. In injuring Plaintiff's median nerve at the time of the carpal tunnel release;

d. In failing to timely and properly diagnose Plaintiff's progressing neurological deficits;

e. In failing to timely and properly clinically manage and/or treat Plaintiff's post-operative course;

f. In failing to recognize the significance and implications of Plaintiff's post-operative neurological problems;

g. In failing to refer Plaintiff to a specialist so that her condition could have been diagnosed and treated promptly and accurately; and

h. In failing to recognize the significance and implications of lacerating the Plaintiff's median nerve.

18. As a result of these breaches of duty, the Plaintiff has suffered the following injuries and damages:

a. subsequent surgery for nerve grafts;

b. loss of sensation in her hand and fingers, specifically left index finger;

c. scarring;

d. laceration of several fascicles of the left median nerve in the area of the left carpal tunnel;

e. altered sensation involving the radial three and a half digits of the left hand;

f. pain in the area of the left hand;

g. atrophy of the left hand;

h. painful sensitivity of the left hand and fingers;

i. loss of strength to the Plaintiff's left hand and fingers;

j. numbness in the left hand and fingers;

k. depression; and

l. insomnia.

19. Because of these breaches of duty by Defendant Zeliger, Plaintiff has incurred medical, nursing and hospital expenses, past, present and future.

20. Because of these breaches of duty by Defendant Zeliger, Plaintiff has incurred lost wages, past, present and future.

21. Also because of these breaches of duty, Plaintiff has been deprived of the services, support, comfort, society, companionship, guidance and consortium of her husband and family.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff demands judgment against Defendant Zeliger in an amount in excess of the arbitrational limits of the Court of Common Pleas of Clearfield County, Pennsylvania.

JURY TRIAL DEMANDED.

COUNT II

Plaintiff vs. Defendant Medical Center

22. The averments of Paragraphs 1 through 22 are incorporated herein by reference thereto as though fully set forth herein.

23. At all times material to the facts alleged in this Complaint, Defendant Zeliger was acting within the line and scope of his employment with and in furtherance of the economic interests of the Defendant Medical Center.

24. At all times material to the facts alleged in this Complaint, Defendant Medical Center had a right to control the conduct of Defendant Zeliger and its agents, servants and/or employees in the performance of their work.

25. At all times material to the facts alleged in this Complaint, Plaintiff was of a reasonable belief that the services furnished at Defendant Medical Center were rendered to her for the Defendant Medical Center.

26. Defendant Medical Center had duties to the Plaintiff, among them being the duty to select and retain only competent physicians, the duty to oversee all persons who practice within its walls as to patient care and the duty to formulate, adopt and enforce adequate rules and policies to ensure quality care for patients.

27. Defendant Medical Center was negligent and careless in its care and treatment of services rendered to the Plaintiff in the following particulars:

a. In failing to select and retain competent physicians, specifically Defendant Zeliger;

b. In failing to oversee Defendant Zeliger;

c. In failing to provide adequate procedures and protocols to ensure that the information regarding the Plaintiff's neurological deficits were properly communicated and/or documented;

d. In continuing to have its agents, servants and/or employees provide post-operative care to Plaintiff without properly or timely diagnosing Plaintiff's neurological deficits and post-operative laceration of the median nerve;

e. In failing to properly monitor and to adequately chart the condition of the Plaintiff which would have assisted in making a diagnosis of a lacerated left median nerve post surgery; and

f. In failing to use reasonable care to ensure the competence of Defendant Zeliger and its other medical personnel to treat Plaintiff under the circumstances.

28. As a result of these breaches of duty, Plaintiff has suffered the following injuries and damages:

a. subsequent surgery for nerve grafts;

b. loss of sensation in her hand and fingers, specifically left index finger;

c. scarring;

d. laceration of several fascicles of the left median nerve in the area of the left carpal tunnel;

e. altered sensation involving the radial three and a half digits of the left hand;

f. pain in the are of the left hand;

g. atrophy of the left hand;

h. painful sensitivity of the left hand and fingers;

i. loss of strength to the Plaintiff's left hand and fingers;

j. numbness in the left hand and fingers;

k. depression; and

l. insomnia.

29. Because of these breaches of duty by Defendant Medical Center, Plaintiff has incurred medical, nursing and hospital expenses, past, present and future.

30. Because of these breaches of duty by Defendant Medical Center, Plaintiff has incurred lost wages, past, present and future.

31. Also because of these breaches of duty, Plaintiff has been deprived of the services, support, comfort, society, companionship, guidance and consortium of her husband and family.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff demands judgment against Defendant Medical Center in an amount in excess of the arbitrational limits of the Court of Common Pleas of Clearfield County, Pennsylvania.

JURY TRIAL DEMANDED.

NOW COMES, DuBois Regional Medical Center, by its attorneys, Thomson, Rhodes & Cowie, P.C., and files the following answer and new matter in response to plaintiff's complaint.

ANSWER

1. Defendant is advised and therefore believes and avers that the Pennsylvania Rules of Civil Procedure do not require it to set forth its answers and defenses except as stated below.

2. If and to the extent that any factual averment in the complaint is not responded to in the paragraphs which follow, said allegation is denied for the reason that, after a reasonable investigation, this defendant lacks sufficient information or knowledge upon which to form a belief as to the truth of the averments therein.

3. Each of the paragraphs of this answer should be read so as to incorporate by reference each of the other paragraphs of this answer.

4. The following paragraphs of the complaint are denied for the reason that, after a reasonable investigation, this defendant has insufficient information or knowledge to form a belief as to the truth of the averments therein: 1, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 25.

5. Paragraph 2 of the complaint is admitted except that it is not known what plaintiff is referencing with regard to the averment of "all relevant times," for which reason any reference to "all relevant times" is denied for the reason that, after a reasonable investigation, defendant has insufficient information or knowledge to form a belief as to the truth of the averments therein.

6. The following paragraphs of the complaint are admitted: 3, 4, 5, 6.

7. Paragraph 12 of the complaint is denied for the reason that, after a reasonable investigation, this defendant has insufficient information or knowledge to form a belief as to the truth of the averments therein, because the identify of the alleged agents, servants and/or employees of the hospital is not specified or disclosed. For these same reasons, the reference to "agents, servants and/or employees" in Paragraph 24 of the complaint is denied.

8. Paragraph 13 of the complaint constitutes a conclusion of law to which no further response is required. However, if any response is deemed necessary, this paragraph and sub-paragraph is denied. Further, any claim that Dr. Zeliger is an agent, servant or employee of DuBois Regional Medical Center is denied, because he was an independently practicing physician.

9. Paragraph 14 of the complaint is denied for the reason that, after a reasonable investigation, defendant is unaware as to what the plaintiff is referencing with regard to the allegation that Dr. Zeliger "held himself out" in the manner referenced. Consistent with the averments in the complaint, Dr. Zeliger was a highly skilled surgeon with extensive training and experience in the referenced fields.

10. Paragraphs 15 and 22 of the complaint solely incorporate by reference other paragraphs, for which no separate response is required. However, to the extent that any additional response is deemed necessary, defendant incorporates by reference its answers to those paragraphs which have been incorporated by the plaintiff.

11. Paragraphs 16 and 26 of the complaint constitute conclusions of law to which no further response is required.

12. Paragraphs 17 (including sub-paragraphs (a) through (h)), 18 (including sub-paragraphs (a) through (l)), 19, 20, 21, 23, 27 (including sub-paragraphs (a) through (f)), 28 (including sub-paragraphs (a) through (l)), 29, 30 and 31 of the complaint are denied.

13. Paragraph 24 of the complaint constitutes a conclusion of law to which no further response is required. However, if any response is deemed necessary, this paragraph and sub-paragraph is denied.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff's complaint should be dismissed and judgment should be entered in favor of this defendant.

NEW MATTER

14. Section 606 of the Healthcare Services Malpractice Act of Pennsylvania, 40 P.S. §1301.606 provides that in "the absence of a special contract in writing, a healthcare provider is neither a warrantor nor a guarantor of a cure." This provision is pleaded as an affirmative defense insofar as there was no special contract in writing in this case.

15. This defendant raises all affirmative defenses set forth or available as a result of the provisions in the Healthcare Services Malpractice Act of Pennsylvania, 40 P.S. §1301 et seq. and/or House Bill 1802 (2002).

16. This defendant pleads the applicability of the Pennsylvania Comparative Negligence Statute as an affirmative defense.

17. While denying all negligence and all liability, this defendant avers that if it is found to have been negligent in any respect, any liability resulting therefrom would be diminished or barred by operation of the Pennsylvania Comparative Negligence Statute.

18. Plaintiff's complaint fails to state any cause of action against this defendant.

19. Defendant pleads the doctrines of intervening and superseding causes as affirmative defenses.

20. Defendant pleads "payment" as an affirmative defense to the extent that any amount less than the amount billed for medical services to the plaintiff after the alleged incident was accepted as payment in full.

21. Defendant is not liable for any pre-existing medical conditions which caused the claimed injuries and/or damages.

22. To the extent that evidence develops during discovery to demonstrate the application of the two schools of thought doctrine, defendant pleads that doctrine as providing a complete defense for any alleged negligence and/or malpractice.

23. This defendant raises all affirmative defenses set forth or available as a result of the provisions of House Bill 1802 which became Pennsylvania law in 2002.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff's complaint should be dismissed and judgment should be entered in favor of this defendant.

ANSWER AND NEW MATTER

NOW COMES, Keith L. Zeliger, D.O., by his attorneys, Thomson, Rhodes & Cowie, P.C., and files the following answer and new matter in response to plaintiff's complaint.

ANSWER

1. Defendant is advised and therefore believes and avers that the Pennsylvania Rules of Civil Procedure do not require him to set forth his answers and defenses except as stated below.

2. If and to the extent that any factual averment in the complaint is not responded to in the paragraphs which follow, said allegation is denied for the reason that, after a reasonable investigation, this defendant lacks sufficient information or knowledge upon which to form a belief as to the truth of the averments therein.

3. Each of the paragraphs of this answer should be read so as to incorporate by reference each of the other paragraphs of this answer.

4. The following paragraphs of the complaint are denied for the reason that, after a reasonable investigation, this defendant has insufficient information or knowledge to form a belief as to the truth of the averments therein: 1, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 25.

5. Paragraph 2 of the complaint is admitted except that it is not known what plaintiff is referencing with regard to the averment of "all relevant times," for which reason any reference to "all relevant times" is denied for the reason that, after a reasonable investigation, defendant has insufficient information or knowledge to form a belief as to the truth of the averments therein.

6. The following paragraphs of the complaint are admitted: 3, 4, 5, 6.

7. Paragraph 12 of the complaint is denied for the reason that, after a reasonable investigation, this defendant has insufficient information or knowledge to form a belief as to the truth of the averments therein, because the identify of the alleged agents, servants and/or employees of the hospital is not specified or disclosed. For these same reasons, the reference to "agents, servants and/or employees" in Paragraph 24 of the complaint is denied.

8. Paragraph 13 of the complaint constitutes a conclusion of law to which no further response is required. However, if any response is deemed necessary, this paragraph and sub-paragraph is denied. RE: Mary C. Heitzenrater

Dear Attorney Loughren,

Please accept this letter in response to your questions in your recent correspondence to me with regard to Ms. Mary Heitzenrater whom I have seen in my office. Ms. Heitzenrater originally presented to me on 02/11/00 and she reported to me that she had had pain complaints which developed in her left hand for approximately two to three months prior to that time and reported no accidents or unusual activities around the time her complaints occurred. She described a dull pain in her left hand region which came and went with radiation to her left palm and left #1 through 3 digits and increased with computer work and decreased with rest and was associated with decreased sensation noted in that area as well as awakening her at night. She denied any left shoulder pain complaints or neck pain complaints or proximal upper extremity complaints in the left side or any right upper extremity complaints. My initial examination of her revealed her to be pleasant, cooperative, alert, awake, and oriented and her manual muscle testing was intact throughout both upper extremities and noted to be full. There was no increased tone noted. Sensory examination revealed light touch to be intact both arms with no variance appreciated and reflexes were normal and symmetric. There was a positive left Phalen's test and left reverse Phalen's noted in the left carpal tunnel region. There was a left negative nerve percussion test and nerve compression test. I did have the opportunity to perform electrodiagnostic testing on 02/11/00 and this was consistent with a left median entrapment in the region of the carpal tunnel, moderate to severe, based upon comparative values affecting motor and sensory components, affecting primarily myelin components, with no associated electromyographic evidence seen of denervation. I did discuss with her treatment options with regard to surgical versus nonsurgical intervention and patient at that time elected to proceed with conservative treatment and I did write a prescription for a brace as well as some vitamin supplementation and did review with her some basic stretching exercises.

Ms. Heitzenrater was subsequently seen by me on 03/15/00 and states that she did feel much improved from using the brace. She stated that it significantly helped, however, she was wearing it at night only and did have difficulty with coordination using it at work. She had been taking the vitamins and was unsure whether or not they had been helping and she still had some complaints in her left upper extremity and states it was much improved although was beginning to develop some mild complaints on her right side. My impression at that time was that she had left carpal tunnel syndrome with complaints of pain. She wished to defer on surgical intervention at that point and did discuss with her the option of injection treatment although as noted did want to defer on this. I did provide a brace for her to use during work due to the difficulty she was having tolerating the other provided brace.

Ms. Heitzenrater was not seen by me until 08/23/00 and reported at that time that she had surgery in April, 2000 by Dr. Zeliger and had a splint for approximately one week. She stated she was very tender in her thenar eminence and felt a scalding hot sensation afterwards. It felt sensitive and she had tightness and swelling. She was prescribed a Medrol Dose Pack and did have physical therapy at Christ the King Manor and she was unsure whether or not it helped. She received desensitization treatments which minimally helped. She has had pain at rest including electric shock-like sensation from her #1 through 3 digits and the numbness seems to worsen in her #1 and 2 digits. She states she also had some tingling complaints which are problematic to her as well. I did have the opportunity to perform electrodiagnostic testing which was consistent with a left median nerve compression in the region of the carpal tunnel, severe, affecting motor and sensory components, affecting myelin and axonal components with associated electromyographic evidence seen of denervation and reinnervation. In comparison with previous electrodiagnostic testing of 02/11/00, this represented a worsening of the median nerve neuropathy. There continued to be no generalized electrodiagnostic evidence seen suggestive of a generalized polyneuropathy. My treatments consisted of patient to continue with her bracing regimen as well as continue on the prescriptions as written for and I did discuss with her possible other treatment options.

Ms. Heitzenrater did follow-up with me on 11/09/00 for ongoing complaints of pain in her left upper extremity. She reported having numbness in her hands which seemed to be somewhat worse and she had noticed some swelling in her hands with associated color changes. She did see Dr. Imbriglia and did have a nerve transplant done in October, 2000. She describes what may have been a superficial radial nerve transplant to the median nerve. She reported that she noticed no difference from the surgery and continued to have pain complaints, numbness, and color changes noted as well as variations in temperature. She had been working using only her right arm and this has been difficult for her. On my physical examination, I noted there to be a decreased affect from previous evaluation and there was significantly impaired movement and strength noted in the left upper extremity. There was hyperpathia and allodynia appreciated in the left hand region and there was atrophy noted with a sheen appearance in the left upper extremity. There was some mild swelling noted in the left thenar eminence as well. My impression at that time was previous left carpal tunnel syndrome status post a nerve graft with evident sympathetic response. I did proceed with bone scan imaging testing and the results of this revealed no findings to indicate a reflex sympathetic dystrophy in the left wrist or hand. I did refer patient for injection treatment and I did write for medication intervention as well. Consideration of a therapy program was discussed, however, deferred on this due to considerations of patient's recent transplantation. She was encouraged to follow-up with the surgeon with regard to possible activity level restrictions as discussed at that time.

Ms. Heitzenrater followed up with me on 12/04/00 and indicated she continued to complain of sensitivity as well as irritability and ongoing pain complaints. There was some question with regard to the medication previously prescribed by me. She did follow-up with Dr. Imbriglia and was scheduled for a tentative right upper extremity carpal tunnel release, however, she wished to hold off on this due to her complaints. She was not cleared to participate in therapy for her left hand and Dr. Imbriglia recommended holding off on the injections which I recommended previously. Evaluation at that time revealed once again allodynia and hyperpathia appreciated in the left upper extremity with abnormal posture and with regard to decreased spontaneous activity seen in the left upper extremity and decreased range of motion noted actively and passively. There was an unchanged sheen seen with some slight swelling in the left thenar eminence also without change. My impression at that time was previous left carpal tunnel syndrome - status post nerve graft with evidence of sympathetic response. I discussed with patient that although I gave great respect to Dr. Imbriglia's opinion, I did feel it was appropriate for her to receive a sympathetic ganglion block. I did discuss with her specific considerations of complex regional pain syndrome, what is commonly referred to as reflex sympathetic dystrophy, and also reported possible diagnostic benefit of the injection as well. Did discuss with her the use of medications and did write for prescriptions for her with regard to this. The patient is encouraged to follow-up with Dr. Imbriglia for ongoing treatment rendered by him.

I did receive a 12/26/00 letter from Dr. Valigorsky indicating that he did see Ms. Heitzenrater in the office although is unsure whether or not she had a true RSD versus regeneration of new nerve tissue. His plan was to see her back after the right carpal tunnel release to see how she does at that time.

Ms. Heitzenrater's current complaints appear to be directly attributed to a median nerve pathology. The electrodiagnostic testing performed on 02/11/00 and 08/23/00 show a worsening of a median nerve neuropathy during this time period which includes the history as noted above. It would be my opinion that her current complaints are anatomically and clinically consistent with a median nerve pathology. Ms. Heitzenrater's condition at present is guarded. Although I am optimistic that the nerve regeneration will take and that I believe her complex regional pain syndrome or RSD complaints will abate, this often does not happen in these cases and it simply is too early to tell her long term prognosis at this point. As I noted, I do think it is appropriate for her to receive injections and I did start Ms. Heitzenrater on medications for her to take. My last visit with her was on 12/04/00 and she has not followed up with me since that time but has had appointments with Dr. Valigorsky and Dr. Imbriglia. Further care will need to be assessed based upon physical examination and patient's self reported complaints and once again based on my last visit with her it was too early to determine long term prognosis.

Thank you for this opportunity to discuss Ms. Heitzenrater's case with you.

Sincerely,

Martin A. Schaeffer, M.D.

HEITZENRATER, MARY C.

HX: The patient is a 45-year-old R hand dominant woman who previously worked as a registered nurse at Christ the King Manor Nursing Home which is a 220-bed nursing home. Ms. Heitzenrater worked in the skilled nursing unit where the patients had I.V.'s, tracheotomies, and other problems requiring skilled care. Ms. Heitzenrater indicated that her job activities involved starting I.V.'s, drawing blood samples, and supervising the staff of the unit.

The patient brought with her copies of reports of electrodiagnostic studies she had undergone on 2/11/00 and 8/23/00. These studies had been performed by Dr. Schaeffer. In addition, the patient had brought a copy of the operative report concerning a procedure performed on 9/29/00 by Dr. Imbriglia.

The patient was evaluated by Dr. Schaeffer on 2/11/00 and his office note indicates that the patient's chief complaint was that of L hand pain which had its onset approximately two to three months previously. The pain was experienced in the patient's L hand and involved L 1-3. The patient also noted diminished sensation in this area and this would occasionally awaken her at night. Although the worksheet portion of Dr. Schaeffer's evaluation was not available, he concluded that the distal latencies of the sensory and motor portions of the L median nerve were prolonged and the electromyographic testing "of selected left upper extremity musculature" revealed no evidence of acute or chronic denervation. Dr. Schaeffer concluded that the patient was experiencing entrapment of the L median nerve in the region of the L carpal tunnel of a moderate to severe degree.

In April of 2000 the patient had undergone release of the carpal tunnel of her L hand performed by Dr. Zeliger. The patient indicated that Dr. Zeliger had made a "tiny incision" in what would be the proximal portion of the palm of her L hand and that only two sutures had been placed to close the wound. The patient indicated that postoperatively she experienced "terrible burning pain" and a "knot" in the palm of her L hand. At one point a Medrol Dosepak [this is a several-day course of a potent steroid medication] had been prescribed. The patient indicated her

L hand "kept swelling and changing color" and that she had experienced difficulty in flexing the fingers of her L hand, especially the L index finger.

The patient had undergone a second electrodiagnostic evaluation by Dr. Schaeffer on 8/23/00. In his report concerning that study he noted that the distal latency of the motor portion of the L median nerve was at the upper limits of normal and no response could be stimulated in the sensory portion of the L median nerve in spite of multiple stimulation attempts. The amplitude of the impulses in the motor portion of the L median nerve were noted to be diminished compared the situation at the time of the 2/11/00 evaluation. On electromyographic testing of the L abductor policis brevis muscle [this is innervated by the L median nerve], there was evidence of fibrillation potentials as well as polyphasic potentials. Dr. Schaeffer concluded the 8/23/00 electrodiagnostic evaluation was "consistent with a left median nerve compression in the region of the carpal tunnel, severe, affecting motor and sensory components, affecting myelin and axonal components with associated electromygraphic evidence seen of denervation and reinervation. In comparison with previous electrodiagnostic testing of 02/11/00 this represents a worsening of the left median neuropathy." The patient indicated that Dr. Schaeffer recommended that she be evaluated by Dr. Imbriglia.

The patient indicated that when she was evaluated by Dr. Imbriglia he had felt that her L median nerve had been "cut." She indicated he advised her that the nerve "can't be fixed but I think I can help you." On 9/29/00 Dr. Imbriglia undertook surgical treatment of the patient's L hand. On review of the operative report concerning the procedure, the report was dictated by Dr. David Miller who apparently assisted Dr. Imbriglia, the preoperative diagnosis was "likely transection of the common digital nerve to the index finger on the left" and the postoperative diagnosis was "neuroma in continuity of the median nerve to the left likely involving the fibers to the index finger." The title of the operation was "Exploration of the median nerve, neurolysis, posterior interosseous nerve graft bypass interpositioning for the median nerve transected fibers." In the "Justification for Procedure" section of the operative report, it was noted that the patient had complained of "left index finger numbness occurring immediately after a recent small incision open carpal tunnel release. The patient reports that immediately after the surgery she had no feeling in her L index finger. At physical exam the patient was noted to be completely insensate in her index, likely a laceration of the common digital nerve to the index finger or proximal to that." In the description of the operative procedure, after the epineurium of the L median nerve was opened, "we identified an area of a neuroma in continuity which appeared to be fascicles leading to the common digital nerve of the index finger." A segment of the L posterior interosseous nerve was harvested and used as a nerve graft. The operative report indicates, "...the bypass graft was performed to connect the transected fascicles noted in the median nerve, bypassing the neuroma in continuity present. Another small area where there appeared to be a laceration of one of the fascicles also was bypass grafted using the remaining posterior interosseous graft."

I questioned Ms. Heitzenreiter in regard to difficulties currently experienced with her L hand. The patient reported experiencing a sensation in her L index finger as if that area is being jabbed. She noted that the skin in the operative area in the palm of her L hand and the skin overlying the thenar muscles of her L thumb is painfully sensitive. The patient indicated that the current area of painful sensitivity of the palm of her L hand is the same as was the situation following the first operative procedure. The patient noted that sensation was altered in her L thumb, that the whole of her L index finger was numb, that sensation was altered in the radial portion of her L middle finger and slightly altered in the ulnar portion of that finger, and that sensation was normal in her L ring finger.

The patient indicated that she tends not to use her L index finger and that the finger has "no strength." The patient reported that because of inability to feel with her L hand the individual sheets of paper in medical charts at work she has difficulty turning the pages of charts using that hand. The patient indicated that even though the radial three digits of her L hand are numb she nevertheless experiences pain in those digits and she indicated that the pain in L 2 is severe. The patient indicated that when simultaneously extending and abducting the fingers of her L hand she experiences pain in the palm of that hand. The patient reported that on occasion she experiences swelling of the area of the dorsal aspect of her L hand. The patient indicated the pain experienced in her L hand interferes with sleep.

The patient reported that Neurontin had been prescribed by Dr. Schaeffer and that this had been of no help in relieving the pain experienced in her L hand. In addition, the medication caused some sedation. The patient reported that use of Oxycontin 10 mg twice a day along with use of Percocet decreased her alertness. The patient indicated that she had asked Dr. Imbriglia about a course of sympathetic nerve blocks for her L upper extremity. She indicated he did not recommend such treatment. The patient had been evaluated at the Pain Clinic of the Dubois Regional Medical Center, I believe the patient indicated she had been evaluated by Dr. Belacowski [the spelling of the physician's name may not be correct] and the physician doubted that she was experiencing a reflex sympathetic dystrophy condition involving her L upper extremity.

The patient on questioning reported that she had returned to work, primarily using her R hand, two days following the April 2000 operative procedure. Following the September 2000 operative procedure, the patient was off work for a period of one week and then returned to work to an administrative job position.

PMH: ADVERSE MEDICATION REACTIONS: None. MEDICATIONS: Demadex, a diuretic, used to control hypertension. Accupril was used to control blood pressure. The patient used Singular and another inhaler. Celexa, Aciphex, and Glucophage were used. The patient indicated Glucophage was used for weight control and to treat polycystic ovaries. TOBACCO USE: None. ALCOHOL USE: The patient rarely consumed alcoholic beverages. HOSPITALIZATIONS: To undergo a cesarean section, to undergo a lumbar dissectomy in approximately 2000, for treatment of chronic obstructive pulmonary disease/asthma, and for treatment of sleep apnea. REVIEW OF SYSTEMS was remarkable for a history of hypertension.

EX: On examination of the L upper extremity, there was a 5.5 cm-long longitudinally scar on the dorsal aspect of the distal portion of the L forearm in approximately the area of the midline of the forearm. The scar was not tender when stroked with the examiner's thumbnail. There was no apparent swelling of the soft tissues on the dorsal aspect of the L hand.

There was a scar having a chevron configuration on the palmar aspect of the L wrist having a length of approximately 2 cm. The distal end of this scar joined a scar in the palm of the L hand lying near the thenar crease. This latter scar had a length of approximately 5 cm. On stroking the pads of the radial three digits of the L hand while simultaneously stroking those of the R hand, there was felt to be abnormal dryness of the pads of the indicated three digits of the L hand. There was some moistness of the pads of L 4 and 5. On stroking individually the pads of the five digits of the L hand while simultaneously stroking the corresponding digit of the R hand, the patient indicated that sensation was altered in the L thumb, substantially altered in the L index and middle fingers, and was slightly altered in the radial portion of the pad of the L ring finger. Sensation was normal in the ulnar portion of the pad of the L ring finger and in the pad of the L small finger. There was a hint of atrophy of the soft tissues in the area of the distal phalanx of the L index finger. It was possible to passively flex the L index finger to a fairly good degree. When performing this maneuver, there was noted to be some tone present in the extensor tendons of L 2. The patient reported experiencing some pain when the examiner passively flexed L 2. The patient was able to demonstrated a fairly good active range of motion on flexion of the L index finger.

The patient tolerated having the examiner rub the cutaneous scar in the palm of the L hand and gently stroke that scar using the examiner's thumbnail. On tapping over the scar, a Tinel's sign was elicited in the area of the distal portion of the scar. The patient indicated that the sensation which was experienced did not radiate distally.

The patient's grip strength values using Handle Spacing II of the grip meter were 40 lbs. for the R hand and 12 lbs. for the L hand. The patient withheld the L index finger from the handles of the grip meter when demonstrating the grip strength of the L hand.

DX: 1. Post laceration of several fascicles of the L median nerve in the area of the L carpal tunnel occurring at the time of the 4/27/00 operative procedure. 955.1/998.8

2. Altered sensation involving the radial 3½ digits of the L hand related to #1. 782.0

3. Pain experienced in the area of the L hand related to #1. 729.5

RX: I had a discussion with Ms. Heitzenrater and her husband who accompanied her. I did not believe that any additional surgical treatment of the patient's L median nerve in the area of the carpal tunnel of her L hand would be of any benefit either in diminishing the pain experienced in her L hand or in improving the quality of sensation present in the affected digits of that hand. After examining the patient on one occasion I was not of the opinion that she was experiencing a reflex sympathetic dystrophy condition [the current term for this is complex regional pain condition, type II] involving her L hand.

I did suggest to the patient that she attempt to minimize holding her L index finger in extension and excluding that digit from use. I demonstrated for the patient how to gently perform passive flexion exercises for her L index finger. I also felt the patient could loosely buddy-tape her L index finger to her L middle finger in an effort to overcome her habit of holding her L index finger in extension. This has undoubtedly developed because of the degree of alteration in sensation and the painful quality of sensation affecting that finger. Although not recorded in my handwritten notes, I believe I may well have suggested to the patient that she gently massage her L index finger and other painfully sensitive areas of her L hand in an effort to diminish the painful sensitivity of those areas. Why such massage on occasion may be effective in diminishing painful sensitivity of nerve origin of an area is not clear. I did suggest that the patient might gently perform gripping exercises for her L hand and I suggested that she simply gently squeeze a clean folded sock.

In regard to pain medication, I suggested that the patient use Oxycontin 10 mg but that at least initially she use it only at bedtime. The patient had reported that when previously using Oxycontin it had affected her alertness. Obviously, if the medication causes some sedation at night this is not a liability and actually is of some benefit. Assuming that the patient's nervous system becomes tolerant for the sedating effects of Oxycontin, later she may be able to use the medication during the daytime portion of a day and not experience sedation.

I discussed with the patient the matter of whether there was evidence that Dr. Zeliger had injured her L median nerve at the time of the 4/27/00 operative procedure. I advised the patient that it was my opinion after reading the operative note dictated in association with the 9/29/00 operative procedure that there was clear evidence that several of the fascicles of the L median nerve in the area of her L carpal tunnel had been previously lacerated and that was the reason that Dr. Imbriglia had placed nerve grafts in an effort to restore continuity to the injured nerve fascicles. Inasmuch as the median nerve in the area of the carpal tunnel is relatively deeply situated and the patient had not suffered any laceration injury of that area prior to the 4/00 operative procedure, the only explanation for the injury of the indicated nerve fascicles is that they were damaged at the time of the 4/00 operative procedure. Such an injury of a median nerve occurring at the time of a carpal tunnel release is below the appropriate standard of care.

Because the patient does reside a substantial travel distance from Pittsburgh, she was not given a specific return appointment at this time. She was invited to call me if she had any additional questions or concerns. At her request, a copy of these notes will be sent to Attorney John Perry. RGK/cd

HEITZENRATER, MARY

HX: The patient previously had been examined on one occasion, on 1/28/02. On questioning the patient in regard to her health, she indicated that she has been healthy but that in August 2002 she underwent a hysterectomy and oophorectomy. On questioning, the patient indicated she continues to work as an R.N. assessment coordinator at a nursing home. She indicated that she assesses the level of care that a prospective nursing home patient would require, visits patients in hospital or at home to assess their situation and once they are admitted to her nursing home she monitors for changes in their condition, their laboratory results, etc. Ms. Heitzenrater indicated that prior to the April 2000 surgical treatment of her L hand she had worked in this position and had also worked on the nursing units of the nursing home. However, because of the difficulties experienced with her L hand subsequent to 4/2000 the patient has not worked on a nursing unit with one exception and that basically was an urgent situation when an R.N. was required simply to be present on the nursing unit.

The patient reported difficulties in performing a number of activities. She noted that she is unable to open child resistant medication bottles. The patient reported experiencing pain in her L hand when grasping even soft objects using that hand. The patient indicated that trimming the nails of her R hand was "impossible" because of the pain experienced in her L hand. The patient noted that she was unable to lift her infant grandson because of pain experienced in her L hand. The patient indicated that she drops "everything" from the grasp of her L hand. The patient indicated that it was a "struggle to flip" the pages of nursing home charts or to grasp the charts. Ms. Heitzenrater indicated that she was unable to open the door of her car using her L hand. She indicated that she cannot tolerant the presence of a glove on her L hand and cannot wear her wedding band on her L ring finger or a watch on her L wrist because of painful sensitivity of the skin in those areas. The patient reported that when blow drying her hair with the dryer grasped in her R hand the hot air striking her L hand was painful. The patient reported experiencing an annoying sensation in her L hand when wringing a dishcloth. She indicated that she cannot securely grasp a fork in her L hand while cutting food with a knife grasped in her R hand. Ms. Heitzenrater indicated that her L thumb and L index finger "ache all the time." She reported that what would be the radial portion of her L hand "feels like it is cramped up." The patient noted that she constantly uses her R hand to stroke her L hand in the proximal to distal direction in an effort to improve the comfort of the hand. Ms. Heitzenrater noted that she does have a tremor of her L hand.

On questioning the patient in regard to whether she previously had undergone a course of sympathetic nerve blocks of her L upper extremity, she indicated that when she had attended a pain clinic that Dr. Belacosky [the spelling of the physician's name may not be correct] was reluctant to perform such a block because of the patient's asthma condition. While the patient was in the office today, I did contact Dr. Doris Cope of the UPMC Pain Clinic in regard to performing cervical sympathetic nerve blocks on an individual having asthma. Dr. Cope indicated that that was a concern. She indicated that if the patient's blood oxygen saturation level was, for instance 88% [normally this value is 98%], or the patient experiences breathing difficulty when lying flat there would be concern about performing a cervical sympathetic nerve block. Part of the concern relates to the fact that the sympathetic block may temporarily paralyze the vocal chord on the side where the sympathetic block is performed and this does increase the work of breathing. After my conversation with Dr. Cope, Ms. Heitzenrater noted that she does have ready access to a blood oxygen monitor at work and that not infrequently she has checked her blood oxygen saturation level and its value was 89%. Ms. Heitzenrater also reported experiencing some difficulty in breathing when lying flat. Because of these various factors, it appears that a course of cervical sympathetic nerve blocks of Ms. Heitzenrater's L upper extremity is not a reasonable option. I did suggest to the patient that she make several checks of her blood oxygen saturation level during the next several weeks.

EX: Using an infrared thermometer, the temperatures of the palmar and dorsal aspects of the patient's R and L hands were measured. The temperature of the palmar aspect of the R hand was 93 degrees F and that of the L hand 95 degrees F. The temperature of the palm of the L hand was rechecked and was again 95 degrees F. The temperatures of the dorsal aspects of the patient's R and L hands were both 94 degrees F. There was observed to be a mild tremor of the L hand.

On stroking the pads of L 1 and L 2, the patient indicated sensation was both diminished in those areas and had painful qualities. Sensation was diminished in the pad of L 3. The patient indicated sensation was normal in the pads of L 4 and 5. On stroking the radial portion of the palm of the L hand, the patient indicated sensation was altered in the area lying radial to approximately the imaginary line between the metacarpals of L 3 and 4. There was some atrophy of the soft tissues of the pad of the L index finger, especially the distal portion of that area.

There was no clear evidence of swelling of the soft tissues on the dorsal aspects of the four fingers of the L hand. There was observed to be some swelling of the dorsal aspect of the L thumb. There was noted to be some enlargement of the dorsal aspect of the IP joint of the L thumb and that area was tender, especially its radial portion. On palpation of the palmar aspects of the area of the MP joint of L 1, there was noted to be a nodule in that area which was larger than that present on the palmar aspect of the MP joint of the R thumb. With effort, secondary to pain, the patient was able to demonstrate essentially full ranges of motion on extension of the five digits of the L hand. On having the patient actively flex the fingers of the L hand, the ranges of motion of L 2 and 3 were somewhat diminished and the patient reported experiencing pain when demonstrating this motion. The patient indicated it was painful/disagreeable when the examiner rubbed the surgical scar present in the palm of the L hand.

The patient's grip strength values using Handle Spacing II of the grip meter were 16 lbs. for the R hand and 7 lbs. for the L hand.

DX: 1. Post laceration of several fascicles of the L median nerve in the area of the L carpal tunnel. 955.1

2. Altered sensation involving the radial three digits of the L hand related to #1. 782.0

3. Pain and painful sensitivity of areas of the radial portion of the L hand. 729.5/782.0

RX: I had a discussion with the patient and her husband who accompanied her. I felt there was no good solution for the difficulties which Ms. Heitzenriter experiences with her L hand. On questioning her in regard to use of Neurontin, she indicated in the past she had used Neurontin 300 mg which had been prescribed to be used three times a day. The patient indicated the medication in this dose caused somnolence. I felt there was a possibility that if Neurontin were used initially in a low dose [100 mg] and the dose gradually increased that it might not cause somnolence. Therefore, Neurontin 100 mg was prescribed to be used once a day for a period of one week and thereafter the dose was to be increased by 1 tablet a day each week.

I felt there was a possibility that use of a local anesthetic cream, specifically Emla cream, applied to the painfully sensitive areas of the patient's L hand might be helpful in temporarily diminishing the painful sensitivity of those areas. The patient was provided with a prescription for 3 tubes of Emla.

While there currently is no reliable way to relieve the pain which Ms. Heitzenrager experiences in her L hand, I did raise the option of possibly having a nerve stimulator surgically placed to mask the pain which the patient experiences in her L hand. This of course is an invasive procedure and the results are not uniformly good. I indicated to Ms. Heitzenrager that I did have one patient who had undergone the procedure and while the procedure had substantially diminished the pain which he had experienced in his affected upper extremity, the procedure did result in the patient experiencing neck pain and some pain in the opposite upper extremity. I indicated to the patient that if she wished I would provide her with the name of a neurosurgeon at UPMC who has experience with placement of nerve stimulators.

I had a discussion with the patient in regard to pain medication. At the time of the 1/28/02 visit I had prescribed use of Oxycontin 10 mg. The patient used the medication and had expended her supply of the medication but for whatever reasons had not called and requested another prescription. Today I provided the patient with a prescription for Oxycontin 10 mg. To address breakthrough pain, I also provided the patient with a prescription for Percocet 5 mg. I had a brief discussion with the patient in regard to the difference between addiction and physical dependence. I noted that physical dependence is an expected consequence of chronic use of a narcotic pain medication while addiction refers to compulsive use of a substance not directly related to the individual experiencing pain. I indicated to Ms. Heitzenrater that after examining her on two occasions it is my best opinion that the chance that she would become addicted to narcotic pain medication, using the word in its proper sense, was essentially zero.

Because the patient does reside a substantial distance from Pittsburgh and the patient well understood that she was welcome to call me at any time to discuss the difficulties experienced with her L hand, I asked to again examine her in March or April of 2004. A copy of these notes will be sent to Attorney Kathleen Segmiller who currently represents the patient. RGK/cd

HX: The patient had last been examined on 10/6. On questioning the patient in regard to her health since that time, she indicated that she had bone spurs on both of her heals and a "tear" of her L achilles tendon. Regarding the bone spurs, the patient had not worked for a period of three months. The patient indicated that she was to undergo a specialized ultrasound procedure to disintegrate the heel spurs. In addition, the patient indicated that she was to undergo bariatric surgery.

On questioning the patient in regard to use of Neurontin 100 mg which had been prescribed at the time of the prior visit, the patient indicated that the medication in this dose had not caused nausea but likewise had not provided any pain relief. On questioning the patient in regard to Emla cream, which had been prescribed at the time of the prior visit, the patient indicated that the anesthetic effect was of short duration and was not of substantial benefit in regard to pain experience in her L hand.

The patient indicated that there had been no change in the condition of her L hand. She indicated that the palm of that hand remained painfully sensitive. The patient indicated, "I drop everything I pick up" and this seemingly was related to the painful sensitivity of the palm of the patient's L hand. The patient noted that trimming the nails of the L index and middle fingers was associated with substantial pain and because of the difficulties with her L hand she experiences great difficulty in attempting to trim the nails of her R hand. The patient noted that she was unable to wring a cloth because of the painful condition of her L hand. The patient indicated that some days because of swelling of her L hand she is unable to wear a watch on the area of her L wrist. The patient reported experiencing "burning" and "scalding" pain when the palm of the L hand contacts an object. The patient reported experiencing pain in her L hand simply with motion of the digits of the hand. Ms. Heitzenrater noted that recently it had been necessary for her to work on a nursing unit and she was unable to unscrew the cap from a portion of an IV infusion system.

EX: On inspection of the L hand, there was felt to be subtle fullness of the tissues on its dorsal aspect. On stroking the pads of the digits of the L hand, the patient indicated that of L 1 was numb, that of L 2 was numb and painful, that of L 3 was numb, and those of L 4 and 5 had normal sensation. Tenderness was elicited on palpation on the radial side of L 3. Its ulnar side was not tender. [The patient pointed out the finding that one side of L 3 was tender while its other side was not.] Tenderness was elicited on stroking the skin in the radial portion of the palm of the L hand and the skin overlying the thenar muscles. There was some tenderness on stroking the skin on the palmar aspect of the L wrist. A surgical scar was present in that area. The patient demonstrated good active ranges of motion on extension of the four fingers of the L hand. On having the patient actively flex the fingers of the L hand, there was a mild impairment of flexion of L 3 and a mild to moderate impairment of flexion of L 2. When the examiner attempted to fully flex L 2 and 3, the patient indicated this was associated with pain. An infrared themometer was used to measure the temperatures of the palms of the L and R hands which were respectively 97 degrees F and 98 degrees F.

DX: 1. Post surgical injury of the L median nerve in the area of the L carpal tunnel. 955.1

2. Altered sensation involving the radial three digits of the L hand related to #1. 782.0

3. Pain and painful sensitivity of the area of the radial portion of the palm of the L hand and the palmar aspect of the L wrist. 729.5/782.0

RX: I had a discussion with the patient and her husband who accompanied her. I indicated that with current technology there was no cure for the difficulties which she experiences with her L hand. I did suggest that the patient again use Neurontin but gradually increase the dose from 1 tablet a day up to the equivalent of 20 tablets a day. The patient was provided with a prescription for Neurontin 100 mg to be used once a day and every three days the patient was to increase the dose by 1 tablet a day. The patient was provided today with prescriptions for Oxycontin 10 mg and Percocet 5 mg. The patient had last received prescriptions for these two medications at the time of the 10/6/03 visit. The patient noted that during periods of increased pain use of 1 Percocet 5 mg tablet does not provide her with an adequate degree of pain relief. I suggested that the patient at those times use 2 of the Percocet 5 mg tablets. I noted that even if the patient used 8 Percocet 5 mg tablets a day that the dose of Tylenol which she receives would be less than the recommended maximum of 4 g a day.

The patient was to again be examined in several months when tentatively she will be in Pittsburgh for follow-up following bariatric surgery. A copy of these notes will be sent to Attorney Segmiller. RGK/cd

MOTION TO COMPEL

NOW COME the defendants, by their attorneys, Thomson, Rhodes & Cowie, P.C., and file the following motion to compel and, in support thereof, state as follows:

1. On April 26, 2002, defendants served upon plaintiff's counsel a first set of interrogatories in which defendants sought information regarding special damages.

2. Plaintiff responded to defendant's initial interrogatories on August 29, 2002, stating that information regarding special damages was, "unknown at this time."

3. By letter to plaintiff's counsel dated April 11, 2006, defendant again requested current and complete information regarding special damages, including the damages being claimed as well as the amount of bills paid.

4. To date, plaintiff has not provided any information regarding special damages.

5. Plaintiff's response to this inquiry is necessary in order for the defendants to properly defend against plaintiff's claims.

WHEREFORE, defendants respectfully request this Honorable Court issue an order directing plaintiff to provide current and complete information regarding special damages, including the damages being claimed as well as the amount of bills paid, within twenty (20) days or suffer such sanctions as this court may impose.

Respectfully submitted,

PLAINTIFF'S RESPONSE TO DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO COMPEL

NOW COMES Plaintiff, Mary Heitzenrater, by her attorney, Kathleen A. Segmiller, Esquire, and the law firm of Segmiller & Mendicino, P.C., and files the following Response to Defendants' Motion to Compel and, in support thereof, states as follows:

1. It is admitted that on April 26, 2002, Defendants served Plaintiff's counsel First Set of Interrogatories in which Defendant sought information regarding special damages. Subsequently, Plaintiff, Mary Heitzenrater, executed Authorizations for Defendants to obtain anY all documents from Plaintiff's various medical providers. It is assumed although Defendants have failed to produce any documentation they obtained using the Authorizations that Defendants were able to obtain the requested documentation including medical bills. A true and correct copy of all executed Authorizations executed by the Plaintiff are attached hereto and made a part hereof as Exhibits A, B and C.

2. It is admitted that on August 29, 2002, Plaintiff was without information regarding her special damages although she claimed medical bills and wage loss. Further, Plaintiff has produced copies of her tax returns and is willing to sign any Authorizations requested by the Defendants regarding same.

3. It is admitted that Defendants again requested the current and complete information regarding special damages. Plaintiff's counsel has requested any and all information that Defendants received using the executed Authorizations by the Plaintiff. To date, no medical information, medical records or medical bills have been forwarded by defense counsel to Plaintiff's counsel.

4. It is denied that Plaintiff has not provided any information regarding special damages. Plaintiff has executed numerous medical Authorizations allowing defense counsel to obtain any and all information regarding her medical records and/or medical bills. Plaintiff has also executed Social Security Disability, pharmacy and employment authorizations.

5. While it is acknowledged that Defendants requires this information, it is denied that Plaintiff has not provided any means for defense counsel to obtain any and all medical records, pharmacy records, medical bills, employment records, Social Security Disability records regarding the subject action. Further, defense counsel has failed to provide any medical records, medical bills, etc. which they have obtained using the executed Authorizations by the Plaintiff.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff respectfully requests this Honorable Court issue an Order directing Defendants to provide current and complete information regarding medical records, medical bills and the like which they have obtained using the executed Authorizations and deny Defendants Motion to Compel until said information has been produced.

Respectfully submitted,

RE: Mary C. Heitzenrater vs. Keith Zellinger, D.O & Dubois Regional Medical Center

Dear Mr. Anderson:

Enclosed please find ten Authorizations executed by Mary Heitzenrater in the above-referenced case.

As always, please forward me copies of any and all records or documents you receive on behalf of Mary Heitzenrater using these Authorizations.

Also, I am in receipt of your Motion to Compel filed on August 15, 2002. While I have not yet provided you complete Answers to Interrogatories, we have provided you with copies of Mrs. Heitzenrater's records which we had in our possession. Therefore, technically, paragraph 2 of your Motion to Compel is not accurate.

If you have any questions or concerns, please feel free to give me a call.

Sincerely,

KATHLEEN A. SEGMILLER

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO COMPEL

NOW COMES Plaintiff, Mary Heitzenrater, by her attorney, Kathleen A. Segmiller, Esquire, and the law firm of Segmiller & Mendicino, P.C., and files the following Motion to Compel:

1. On or about October 8, 2002, Plaintiff forwarded to defense counsel a Request for Production of Documents Directed to Defendant. A true and correct copy of the service correspondence is attached hereto and made a part hereof as Exhibit A. Request No. 2 stated that Plaintiff was requesting "complete copies of all medical, physician or hospital records or reports or any other written documents pertaining to the injuries and damages complained of by the Plaintiff in this lawsuit, and the current medical status, future care and medical history of the Plaintiff, including physical and mental treatment."

2. The Request for Production of Documents were deemed to be continuing in nature so as to require Defendants, or anyone on their behalf, to supplement the production with any document requested herein which is unavailable at the time of the production called for, but which becomes available up to the conclusion of the proceedings herein.

3. On or about August 20, 2002, ten (10) Authorizations executed by Mary Heitzenrater were forwarded to defense counsel. A true and correct copy of the August 20, 2002 correspondence is attached hereto and made a part hereof as Exhibit B.

4. No medical records obtained by defense counsel were provided to Plaintiff's counsel from any provider set forth in the executed Authorizations.

5. On or about December 13, 2005, additional executed Authorizations by Mary Heitzenrater were forwarded to defense counsel. A true and correct copy of the December 13, 2005 correspondence is attached hereto and made a part hereof as Exhibit C.

6. To date, no medical records or pharmaceutical records have been forwarded by defense counsel obtained using the executed Authorizations provided to them.

7. To date, Plaintiff has provided to defense counsel the records of Dubois Medical Center, Martin Schaffer, M.D., Keith Zeliger, M.D., Shadyside Hospital, John Bellomo, M.D., Joseph Imbriglio, M.D., Richard Katz, M.D., and Richard Kasdan, M.D. at no cost to the Defendants.

8. There has been no response to any of the requests made by Plaintiff to defense counsel to obtain the additional records.

9. The outstanding medical records are necessary for review by Plaintiff's expert witness prior to the completion of his medical expert report.

10. Plaintiff will be severely prejudiced in the preparation of their case absent the requested medical records.

11. This case is not yet listed for trial.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff, Mary Heitzenrater, requests this Honorable Court enter an Order compelling Defendants to provide full and complete responses and documents as requested in Plaintiff's Request for Production of Documents and correspondence within thirty (30) days of the date of this Order or suffer such sanctions as the Court may deem appropriate.

Respectfully submitted,

SEGMILLER & MENDICINO, P.C.

Dear Mr. Anderson:

Enclosed please find ten Authorizations executed by Mary Heitzenrater in the above-referenced case.

As always, please forward me copies of any and all records or documents you receive on behalf of Mary Heitzenrater using these Authorizations.

Also, I am in receipt of your Motion to Compel filed on August 15, 2002. While I have not yet provided you complete Answers to Interrogatories, we have provided you with copies of Mrs. Heitzenrater's records which we had in our possession. Therefore, technically, paragraph 2 of your Motion to Compel is not accurate.

If you have any questions or concerns, please feel free to give me a call.

DATE OF OR:
SURGEON: JOSEPH E. IMBRIGLIA, M.D.
ASST.: DAVID MILLER, MD

PREOPERATIVE DIAGNOSIS: Right carpal tunnel syndrome.

POSTOPERATIVE DIAGNOSIS: Same.

OPERATION: Right open carpal tunnel release and tenosynovectomy.

ANESTHESIA: Local with sedation.

ESTIMATED BLOOD LOSS: Was minimal.

TOURNIQUET TIME: Five minutes.

COMPLICATIONS: None.

INDICATIONS FOR OPERATION: The patient is a 44 year old female who presented to us with carpal tunnel syndrome and failed conservative treatment and has opted for operative intervention at this time. She had been given the risks and benefits of surgery and consented for surgery.

PROCEDURE: The patient was brought to the OR. The right upper extremity was prepped and draped in sterile fashion. Through a 3.5 cm incision in line with the radial ring finger, we dissected carefully down, identified the transverse carpal ligament. It was completely freed proximally and distally off of the nerve. Once this was complete, the wound was irrigated and tenosynovectomy of the deep flexor tendons was performed. Tourniquet was let down. Hemostasis was achieved and the wound was then closed with 4-0 nylon, sterile dressings were applied. The patient went to the recovery room in stable condition. Tolerated the procedure well.

UNIT #: 696370
DATE OF OR: 09/29/2000
SURGEON: JOSEPH E. IMBRIGLIA, M.D.
ASST.: DAVID ROBERT MILLER, M.D.

PREOPERATIVE DIAGNOSIS: Likely transection of the common digital nerve to the index finger on the left.

POSTOPERATIVE DIAGNOSIS: Neuroma in continuity of the median nerve to the left likely involving the fibers to the index finger.

OPERATION: Exploration of the median nerve, neurolysis, posterior interosseous nerve graft bypass interpositioning for the median nerve transected fibers.

ANESTHESIA: Axillary block with local and sedation.

ESTIMATED BLOOD LOSS: Minimal.

COMPLICATIONS: None.

JUSTIFICATION FOR PROCEDURE: The patient is a 44-year-old female who presented complaining of left index finger numbness occurring immediately after recent small incision open carpal tunnel release. The patient reports that immediately after the surgery she had no feeling in her index finger. At physical exam the patient was noted to be completely insensate in her index, likely a laceration of the common digital nerve to the index finger or proximal to that. She was consented for surgical intervention after the risks and benefits were explained.

PROCEDURE: She was brought to the OR, left upper extremity was prepped and draped in the usual sterile fashion after axillary block anesthesia was obtained. Local infiltration of Lidocaine was obtained. Local infiltration of a 5.5 cm incision we dissected carefully down, identified a significant amount of scar encasing the median nerve. Neurolysis was performed of the median nerve and all of the branches distally. Once this was complete, the epineurium of the median nerve was opened, and fascicles were dissected out carefully throughout the entire nerve under loupe magnification. We identified an area of a neuroma in continuity which appeared to be fascicles leading to the common digital nerve of the index finger. Since there were areas that were unsure of whether complete continuity was maintained, we tried for bypass grafting the area with posterior interosseous nerve graft, so once the ends were dissected out clearly and the neurolysis was complete, we turned the wrist over and through approximately a 5 cm incision dissected carefully down, identified the fourth extensor compartment. This was elevated and the posterior interosseous nerve was identified and approximately 2.5 cm was resected. The wound was then irrigated in that area and closed at a central retinaculum of the fourth compartment using 2-0 absorbable, and then the skin was closed with 4-0 nylon in a running fashion. Next, under loupe magnification and using 9-0 nylon, the bypass graft was performed to connect the transected fascicles noted in the median nerve, bypassing the neuroma in continuity present. Another small area where there appeared to be a laceration of one of the fascicles was also bypass grafted using the remaining posterior interosseous nerve graft. The wound was then thoroughly irrigated. The wound ends were sutured, and the fat graft was placed over top of the repair. The skin was closed with 4-0 nylon in a running fashion, and the patient was to recovery room in stable condition, tolerated the procedure well.

HISTORY: S/P reconstruction of median nerve laceration. The patient is s/p nerve graft. She still has numbness in the index, thumb and middle fingers. She is continuing a strengthening program.

PLAN: I told her at this point the only thing that can be done is watchful waiting and see if we get some result from the nerve graft. I told her she'd never get full motion back. She does state that the hand keeps her awake at night and prevents her from doing many activities of daily living.

REASON FOR VISIT: Return
HISTORY: Patient is s/p PIN nerve graft to the left median nerve. She continues to have significant disability. She is improving somewhat, but she still has decreased sensation in the median nerve distribution.
EXAM: Her thumb and long fingers have sensation to light touch and two-point discrimination of 8mm. Her index finger, however, has poor sensation to pin prick and light touch and two-point discrimination is greater than 10mm.
IMPRESSION: S/P nerve graft to median nerve laceration.
PLAN: She should continue with physical therapy modalities. I explained to her again that her prognosis is extremely unpredictable but she will never have return of normal function of that hand.

IMPRESSION: Aching pain in the arm. DeQuervain's is better. Lateral epicondylitis still painful. She almost has radial nerve symptoms.
PLAN: Begin Medrol Dosepak combined with physical therapy. I also told her that she is retaining a lot of fluid and she's going to talk to her internist about trying to change her diuretic to lose more water as I think that would help her arm. Try these various things. Return to see me in about 4-6 weeks.

Assessment: Deficits identified:
1. Decreased AROM Left wrist
2. Increased pain left wrist
3. Hypersensitivity to hot/cold, tactile left hand

Goals:
1. Patient will be educated and demonstrate independence with HEP (AROM exercises, pain/edema management techniques, scar massage, sensory re-education program) within 2-4 weeks
2. Patient will demonstrate a decrease in edema left wrist/hand by 10-15 ml via volumeter measurement within 2-4 weeks
3. Patient will demonstrate an increase in AROM left wrist by 3-5 degrees and be able to make a composite fist within 3-6 weeks
4. Patient will be able to tolerate a variety of tactile sensations without adverse reaction (increase in pain) via sensory re-education program and ability to comb hair, grasp objects with left hand within 3-6 weeks
5. Patient will demonstrate a decrease in pain to 2-3/10 on pain scale as evidenced by her ability to grasp and complete ADL/ILS activities within 3-6 weeks

Patient's goal: To be able to use left hand in daily activities without pain

Plan of treatment: 2 times a week times 6 weeks followed by re-evaluation
Anticipated duration of treatment6-8 weeks
OT intervention to include: HEP, Pain/edema management techniques, sensory re-education program, AROM exercises progress as appropriate, scar amangement techniques, Iontophoresis
Rehab Potential: Good for the above stated goals

Assessment:
Deficits identified:
1. Decreased AROM right wrist/forearm
2. Decrease right grip and pinch strength
3. Increased pain right thumb area and elbow

Goals:
1. Patient wil be educated and demonstrate independence with HEP (A/AA/PROM exercises, pain management techniques, strengthening as appropriate) within 2-4 weeks
2. Patient will demonstrate an increase in AROM right wrist by 3-5 degrees via clinical measurement and forearm supination by 2-5 degrees as demonstrated by her ability to increase sustained grasp within 2-4 weeks
3. Patient will demonstrate a decrease in pain to 3-4/10 on pain scale as evidenced by her ability to tolerate 30-45 minutes of activity
4. Patient will demonstrate an increase in grip and pinch strenth by 3-5# via clinical measurement and increased ability to grasp and pinch without increase in pain within 4-6 weeks

Long Term Goal:
1. To be able to tolerate functional activity performance without increase in pain with work and leisure activities within 8 weeks

Plan of treatment: 2 times a week times 4 weeks followed by re-evaluation
Anticipated duration of treament: 4-8 weeks
OT intervention to include: Thumb spica splint, HEP, A/AA/PROM exercises as appropriate, masssage, Iontophoresis, pain management techniques, strengthening exercises as appropriate
Rehab Potential: Good for the above stated goals

HEITZENRATER, MARY C.

1/28/02

HX: The patient is a 45-year-old R hand dominant woman who previously worked as a registered nurse at Christ the King Manor Nursing Home which is a 220-bed nursing home. Ms. Heitzenrater worked in the skilled nursing unit where the patients had I.V.'s, tracheotomies, and other problems requiring skilled care. Ms. Heitzenrater indicated that her job activities involved starting I.V.'s, drawing blood samples, and supervising the staff of the unit.

The patient brought with her copies of reports of electrodiagnostic studies she had undergone on 2/11/00 and 8/23/00. These studies had been performed by Dr. Schaeffer. In addition, the patient had brought a copy of the operative report concerning a procedure performed on 9/29/00 by Dr. Imbriglia.

The patient was evaluated by Dr. Schaeffer on 2/11/00 and his office note indicates that the patient's chief complaint was that of L hand pain which had its onset approximately two to three months previously. The pain was experienced in the patient's L hand and involved L 1-3. The patient also noted diminished sensation in this area and this would occasionally awaken her at night. Although the worksheet portion of Dr. Schaeffer's evaluation was not available, he concluded that the distal latencies of the sensory and motor portions of the L median nerve were prolonged and the electromyographic testing "of selected left upper extremity musculature" revealed no evidence of acute or chronic denervation. Dr. Schaeffer concluded that the patient was experiencing entrapment of the L median nerve in the region of the L carpal tunnel of a moderate to severe degree.

In April of 2000 the patient had undergone release of the carpal tunnel of her L hand performed by Dr. Zeliger. The patient indicated that Dr. Zeliger had made a "tiny incision" in what would be the proximal portion of the palm of her L hand and that only two sutures had been placed to close the wound. The patient indicated that postoperatively she experienced "terrible burning pain" and a "knot" in the palm of her L hand. At one point a Medrol Dosepak [this is a several-day course of a potent steroid medication] had been prescribed. The patient indicated her

L hand "kept swelling and changing color" and that she had experienced difficulty in flexing the fingers of her L hand, especially the L index finger.

The patient had undergone a second electrodiagnostic evaluation by Dr. Schaeffer on 8/23/00. In his report concerning that study he noted that the distal latency of the motor portion of the L median nerve was at the upper limits of normal and no response could be stimulated in the sensory portion of the L median nerve in spite of multiple stimulation attempts. The amplitude of the impulses in the motor portion of the L median nerve were noted to be diminished compared the situation at the time of the 2/11/00 evaluation. On electromyographic testing of the L abductor policis brevis muscle [this is innervated by the L median nerve], there was evidence of fibrillation potentials as well as polyphasic potentials. Dr. Schaeffer concluded the 8/23/00 electrodiagnostic evaluation was "consistent with a left median nerve compression in the region of the carpal tunnel, severe, affecting motor and sensory components, affecting myelin and axonal components with associated electromygraphic evidence seen of denervation and reinervation. In comparison with previous electrodiagnostic testing of 02/11/00 this represents a worsening of the left median neuropathy." The patient indicated that Dr. Schaeffer recommended that she be evaluated by Dr. Imbriglia.

The patient indicated that when she was evaluated by Dr. Imbriglia he had felt that her L median nerve had been "cut." She indicated he advised her that the nerve "can't be fixed but I think I can help you." On 9/29/00 Dr. Imbriglia undertook surgical treatment of the patient's L hand. On review of the operative report concerning the procedure, the report was dictated by Dr. David Miller who apparently assisted Dr. Imbriglia, the preoperative diagnosis was "likely transection of the common digital nerve to the index finger on the left" and the postoperative diagnosis was "neuroma in continuity of the median nerve to the left likely involving the fibers to the index finger." The title of the operation was "Exploration of the median nerve, neurolysis, posterior interosseous nerve graft bypass interpositioning for the median nerve transected fibers." In the "Justification for Procedure" section of the operative report, it was noted that the patient had complained of "left index finger numbness occurring immediately after a recent small incision open carpal tunnel release. The patient reports that immediately after the surgery she had no feeling in her L index finger. At physical exam the patient was noted to be completely insensate in her index, likely a laceration of the common digital nerve to the index finger or proximal to that." In the description of the operative procedure, after the epineurium of the L median nerve was opened, "we identified an area of a neuroma in continuity which appeared to be fascicles leading to the common digital nerve of the index finger." A segment of the L posterior interosseous nerve was harvested and used as a nerve graft. The operative report indicates, "...the bypass graft was performed to connect the transected fascicles noted in the median nerve, bypassing the neuroma in continuity present. Another small area where there appeared to be a laceration of one of the fascicles also was bypass grafted using the remaining posterior interosseous graft."

I questioned Ms. Heitzenreiter in regard to difficulties currently experienced with her L hand. The patient reported experiencing a sensation in her L index finger as if that area is being jabbed. She noted that the skin in the operative area in the palm of her L hand and the skin overlying the thenar muscles of her L thumb is painfully sensitive. The patient indicated that the current area of painful sensitivity of the palm of her L hand is the same as was the situation following the first operative procedure. The patient noted that sensation was altered in her L thumb, that the whole of her L index finger was numb, that sensation was altered in the radial portion of her L middle finger and slightly altered in the ulnar portion of that finger, and that sensation was normal in her L ring finger.

The patient indicated that she tends not to use her L index finger and that the finger has "no strength." The patient reported that because of inability to feel with her L hand the individual sheets of paper in medical charts at work she has difficulty turning the pages of charts using that hand. The patient indicated that even though the radial three digits of her L hand are numb she nevertheless experiences pain in those digits and she indicated that the pain in L 2 is severe. The patient indicated that when simultaneously extending and abducting the fingers of her L hand she experiences pain in the palm of that hand. The patient reported that on occasion she experiences swelling of the area of the dorsal aspect of her L hand. The patient indicated the pain experienced in her L hand interferes with sleep.

The patient reported that Neurontin had been prescribed by Dr. Schaeffer and that this had been of no help in relieving the pain experienced in her L hand. In addition, the medication caused some sedation. The patient reported that use of Oxycontin 10 mg twice a day along with use of Percocet decreased her alertness. The patient indicated that she had asked Dr. Imbriglia about a course of sympathetic nerve blocks for her L upper extremity. She indicated he did not recommend such treatment. The patient had been evaluated at the Pain Clinic of the Dubois Regional Medical Center, I believe the patient indicated she had been evaluated by Dr. Belacowski [the spelling of the physician's name may not be correct] and the physician doubted that she was experiencing a reflex sympathetic dystrophy condition involving her L upper extremity.

The patient on questioning reported that she had returned to work, primarily using her R hand, two days following the April 2000 operative procedure. Following the September 2000 operative procedure, the patient was off work for a period of one week and then returned to work to an administrative job position.

PMH: ADVERSE MEDICATION REACTIONS: None. MEDICATIONS: Demadex, a diuretic, used to control hypertension. Accupril was used to control blood pressure. The patient used Singular and another inhaler. Celexa, Aciphex, and Glucophage were used. The patient indicated Glucophage was used for weight control and to treat polycystic ovaries. TOBACCO USE: None. ALCOHOL USE: The patient rarely consumed alcoholic beverages. HOSPITALIZATIONS: To undergo a cesarean section, to undergo a lumbar dissectomy in approximately 2000, for treatment of chronic obstructive pulmonary disease/asthma, and for treatment of sleep apnea. REVIEW OF SYSTEMS was remarkable for a history of hypertension.

EX: On examination of the L upper extremity, there was a 5.5 cm-long longitudinally scar on the dorsal aspect of the distal portion of the L forearm in approximately the area of the midline of the forearm. The scar was not tender when stroked with the examiner's thumbnail. There was no apparent swelling of the soft tissues on the dorsal aspect of the L hand.

There was a scar having a chevron configuration on the palmar aspect of the L wrist having a length of approximately 2 cm. The distal end of this scar joined a scar in the palm of the L hand lying near the thenar crease. This latter scar had a length of approximately 5 cm. On stroking the pads of the radial three digits of the L hand while simultaneously stroking those of the R hand, there was felt to be abnormal dryness of the pads of the indicated three digits of the L hand. There was some moistness of the pads of L 4 and 5. On stroking individually the pads of the five digits of the L hand while simultaneously stroking the corresponding digit of the R hand, the patient indicated that sensation was altered in the L thumb, substantially altered in the L index and middle fingers, and was slightly altered in the radial portion of the pad of the L ring finger. Sensation was normal in the ulnar portion of the pad of the L ring finger and in the pad of the L small finger. There was a hint of atrophy of the soft tissues in the area of the distal phalanx of the L index finger. It was possible to passively flex the L index finger to a fairly good degree. When performing this maneuver, there was noted to be some tone present in the extensor tendons of L 2. The patient reported experiencing some pain when the examiner passively flexed L 2. The patient was able to demonstrated a fairly good active range of motion on flexion of the L index finger.

The patient tolerated having the examiner rub the cutaneous scar in the palm of the L hand and gently stroke that scar using the examiner's thumbnail. On tapping over the scar, a Tinel's sign was elicited in the area of the distal portion of the scar. The patient indicated that the sensation which was experienced did not radiate distally.

The patient's grip strength values using Handle Spacing II of the grip meter were 40 lbs. for the R hand and 12 lbs. for the L hand. The patient withheld the L index finger from the handles of the grip meter when demonstrating the grip strength of the L hand.

DX: 1. Post laceration of several fascicles of the L median nerve in the area of the L carpal tunnel occurring at the time of the 4/27/00 operative procedure. 955.1/998.8

2. Altered sensation involving the radial 3½ digits of the L hand related to #1. 782.0

3. Pain experienced in the area of the L hand related to #1. 729.5

RX: I had a discussion with Ms. Heitzenrater and her husband who accompanied her. I did not believe that any additional surgical treatment of the patient's L median nerve in the area of the carpal tunnel of her L hand would be of any benefit either in diminishing the pain experienced in her L hand or in improving the quality of sensation present in the affected digits of that hand. After examining the patient on one occasion I was not of the opinion that she was experiencing a reflex sympathetic dystrophy condition [the current term for this is complex regional pain condition, type II] involving her L hand.

I did suggest to the patient that she attempt to minimize holding her L index finger in extension and excluding that digit from use. I demonstrated for the patient how to gently perform passive flexion exercises for her L index finger. I also felt the patient could loosely buddy-tape her L index finger to her L middle finger in an effort to overcome her habit of holding her L index finger in extension. This has undoubtedly developed because of the degree of alteration in sensation and the painful quality of sensation affecting that finger. Although not recorded in my handwritten notes, I believe I may well have suggested to the patient that she gently massage her L index finger and other painfully sensitive areas of her L hand in an effort to diminish the painful sensitivity of those areas. Why such massage on occasion may be effective in diminishing painful sensitivity of nerve origin of an area is not clear. I did suggest that the patient might gently perform gripping exercises for her L hand and I suggested that she simply gently squeeze a clean folded sock.

In regard to pain medication, I suggested that the patient use Oxycontin 10 mg but that at least initially she use it only at bedtime. The patient had reported that when previously using Oxycontin it had affected her alertness. Obviously, if the medication causes some sedation at night this is not a liability and actually is of some benefit. Assuming that the patient's nervous system becomes tolerant for the sedating effects of Oxycontin, later she may be able to use the medication during the daytime portion of a day and not experience sedation.

HEITZENRATER, MARY C.

I discussed with the patient the matter of whether there was evidence that Dr. Zeliger had injured her L median nerve at the time of the 4/27/00 operative procedure. I advised the patient that it was my opinion after reading the operative note dictated in association with the 9/29/00 operative procedure that there was clear evidence that several of the fascicles of the L median nerve in the area of her L carpal tunnel had been previously lacerated and that was the reason that Dr. Imbriglia had placed nerve grafts in an effort to restore continuity to the injured nerve fascicles. Inasmuch as the median nerve in the area of the carpal tunnel is relatively deeply situated and the patient had not suffered any laceration injury of that area prior to the 4/00 operative procedure, the only explanation for the injury of the indicated nerve fascicles is that they were damaged at the time of the 4/00 operative procedure. Such an injury of a median nerve occurring at the time of a carpal tunnel release is below the appropriate standard of care.

Because the patient does reside a substantial travel distance from Pittsburgh, she was not given a specific return appointment at this time. She was invited to call me if she had any additional questions or concerns. At her request, a copy of these notes will be sent to Attorney Jon Perry. RGK/cd

HX: The patient previously had been examined on one occasion, on 1/28/02. On questioning the patient in regard to her health, she indicated that she has been healthy but that in August 2002 she underwent a hysterectomy and oophorectomy. On questioning, the patient indicated she continues to work as an R.N. assessment coordinator at a nursing home. She indicated that she assesses the level of care that a prospective nursing home patient would require, visits patients in hospital or at home to assess their situation and once they are admitted to her nursing home she monitors for changes in their condition, their laboratory results, etc. Ms. Heitzenrater indicated that prior to the April 2000 surgical treatment of her L hand she had worked in this position and had also worked on the nursing units of the nursing home. However, because of the difficulties experienced with her L hand subsequent to 4/2000 the patient has not worked on a nursing unit with one exception and that basically was an urgent situation when an R.N. was required simply to be present on the nursing unit.

The patient reported difficulties in performing a number of activities. She noted that she is unable to open child resistant medication bottles. The patient reported experiencing pain in her L hand when grasping even soft objects using that hand. The patient indicated that trimming the nails of her R hand was "impossible" because of the pain experienced in her L hand. The patient noted that she was unable to lift her infant grandson because of pain experienced in her L hand. The patient indicated that she drops "everything" from the grasp of her L hand. The patient indicated that it was a "struggle to flip" the pages of nursing home charts or to grasp the charts. Ms. Heitzenrater indicated that she was unable to open the door of her car using her L hand. She indicated that she cannot tolerant the presence of a glove on her L hand and cannot wear her wedding band on her L ring finger or a watch on her L wrist because of painful sensitivity of the skin in those areas. The patient reported that when blow drying her hair with the dryer grasped in her R hand the hot air striking her L hand was painful. The patient reported experiencing an annoying sensation in her L hand when wringing a dishcloth. She indicated that she cannot securely grasp a fork in her L hand while cutting food with a knife grasped in her R hand. Ms. Heitzenrater indicated that her L thumb and L index finger "ache all the time." She reported that what would be the radial portion of her L hand "feels like it is cramped up." The patient noted that she constantly uses her R hand to stroke her L hand in the proximal to distal direction in an effort to improve the comfort of the hand. Ms. Heitzenrater noted that she does have a tremor of her L hand.

On questioning the patient in regard to whether she previously had undergone a course of sympathetic nerve blocks of her L upper extremity, she indicated that when she had attended a pain clinic that Dr. Belacosky [the spelling of the physician's name may not be correct] was reluctant to perform such a block because of the patient's asthma condition. While the patient was in the office today, I did contact Dr. Doris Cope of the UPMC Pain Clinic in regard to performing cervical sympathetic nerve blocks on an individual having asthma. Dr. Cope indicated that that was a concern. She indicated that if the patient's blood oxygen saturation level was, for instance 88% [normally this value is 98%], or the patient experiences breathing difficulty when lying flat there would be concern about performing a cervical sympathetic nerve block. Part of the concern relates to the fact that the sympathetic block may temporarily paralyze the vocal chord on the side where the sympathetic block is performed and this does increase the work of breathing. After my conversation with Dr. Cope, Ms. Heitzenrater noted that she does have ready access to a blood oxygen monitor at work and that not infrequently she has checked her blood oxygen saturation level and its value was 89%. Ms. Heitzenrater also reported experiencing some difficulty in breathing when lying flat. Because of these various factors, it appears that a course of cervical sympathetic nerve blocks of Ms. Heitzenrater's L upper extremity is not a reasonable option. I did suggest to the patient that she make several checks of her blood oxygen saturation level during the next several weeks.

EX: Using an infrared thermometer, the temperatures of the palmar and dorsal aspects of the patient's R and L hands were measured. The temperature of the palmar aspect of the R hand was 93 degrees F and that of the L hand 95 degrees F. The temperature of the palm of the L hand was rechecked and was again 95 degrees F. The temperatures of the dorsal aspects of the patient's R and L hands were both 94 degrees F. There was observed to be a mild tremor of the L hand.

On stroking the pads of L 1 and L 2, the patient indicated sensation was both diminished in those areas and had painful qualities. Sensation was diminished in the pad of L 3. The patient indicated sensation was normal in the pads of L 4 and 5. On stroking the radial portion of the palm of the L hand, the patient indicated sensation was altered in the area lying radial to approximately the imaginary line between the metacarpals of L 3 and 4. There was some atrophy of the soft tissues of the pad of the L index finger, especially the distal portion of that area.

There was no clear evidence of swelling of the soft tissues on the dorsal aspects of the four fingers of the L hand. There was observed to be some swelling of the dorsal aspect of the L thumb. There was noted to be some enlargement of the dorsal aspect of the IP joint of the L thumb and that area was tender, especially its radial portion. On palpation of the palmar aspects of the area of the MP joint of L 1, there was noted to be a nodule in that area which was larger than that present on the palmar aspect of the MP joint of the R thumb. With effort, secondary to pain, the patient was able to demonstrate essentially full ranges of motion on extension of the five digits of the L hand. On having the patient actively flex the fingers of the L hand, the ranges of motion of L 2 and 3 were somewhat diminished and the patient reported experiencing pain when demonstrating this motion. The patient indicated it was painful/disagreeable when the examiner rubbed the surgical scar present in the palm of the L hand.

The patient's grip strength values using Handle Spacing II of the grip meter were 16 lbs. for the R hand and 7 lbs. for the L hand.

DX: 1. Post laceration of several fascicles of the L median nerve in the area of the L carpal tunnel. 955.1

2. Altered sensation involving the radial three digits of the L hand related to #1. 782.0

3. Pain and painful sensitivity of areas of the radial portion of the L hand. 729.5/782.0

RX: I had a discussion with the patient and her husband who accompanied her. I felt there was no good solution for the difficulties which Ms. Heitzenriter experiences with her L hand. On questioning her in regard to use of Neurontin, she indicated in the past she had used Neurontin 300 mg which had been prescribed to be used three times a day. The patient indicated the medication in this dose caused somnolence. I felt there was a possibility that if Neurontin were used initially in a low dose [100 mg] and the dose gradually increased that it might not cause somnolence. Therefore, Neurontin 100 mg was prescribed to be used once a day for a period of one week and thereafter the dose was to be increased by 1 tablet a day each week.

I felt there was a possibility that use of a local anesthetic cream, specifically Emla cream, applied to the painfully sensitive areas of the patient's L hand might be helpful in temporarily diminishing the painful sensitivity of those areas. The patient was provided with a prescription for 3 tubes of Emla.

While there currently is no reliable way to relieve the pain which Ms. Heitzenrager experiences in her L hand, I did raise the option of possibly having a nerve stimulator surgically placed to mask the pain which the patient experiences in her L hand. This of course is an invasive procedure and the results are not uniformly good. I indicated to Ms. Heitzenrager that I did have one patient who had undergone the procedure and while the procedure had substantially diminished the pain which he had experienced in his affected upper extremity, the procedure did result in the patient experiencing neck pain and some pain in the opposite upper extremity. I indicated to the patient that if she wished I would provide her with the name of a neurosurgeon at UPMC who has experience with placement of nerve stimulators.

I had a discussion with the patient in regard to pain medication. At the time of the 1/28/02 visit I had prescribed use of Oxycontin 10 mg. The patient used the medication and had expended her supply of the medication but for whatever reasons had not called and requested another prescription. Today I provided the patient with a prescription for Oxycontin 10 mg. To address breakthrough pain, I also provided the patient with a prescription for Percocet 5 mg. I had a brief discussion with the patient in regard to the difference between addiction and physical dependence. I noted that physical dependence is an expected consequence of chronic use of a narcotic pain medication while addiction refers to compulsive use of a substance not directly related to the individual experiencing pain. I indicated to Ms. Heitzenrater that after examining her on two occasions it is my best opinion that the chance that she would become addicted to narcotic pain medication, using the word in its proper sense, was essentially zero.

Because the patient does reside a substantial distance from Pittsburgh and the patient well understood that she was welcome to call me at any time to discuss the difficulties experienced with her L hand, I asked to again examine her in March or April of 2004. A copy of these notes will be sent to Attorney Kathleen Segmiller who currently represents the patient. RGK/cd

HX: The patient had last been examined on 10/6. On questioning the patient in regard to her health since that time, she indicated that she had bone spurs on both of her heals and a "tear" of her L achilles tendon. Regarding the bone spurs, the patient had not worked for a period of three months. The patient indicated that she was to undergo a specialized ultrasound procedure to disintegrate the heel spurs. In addition, the patient indicated that she was to undergo bariatric surgery.

On questioning the patient in regard to use of Neurontin 100 mg which had been prescribed at the time of the prior visit, the patient indicated that the medication in this dose had not caused nausea but likewise had not provided any pain relief. On questioning the patient in regard to Emla cream, which had been prescribed at the time of the prior visit, the patient indicated that the anesthetic effect was of short duration and was not of substantial benefit in regard to pain experience in her L hand.

The patient indicated that there had been no change in the condition of her L hand. She indicated that the palm of that hand remained painfully sensitive. The patient indicated, "I drop everything I pick up" and this seemingly was related to the painful sensitivity of the palm of the patient's L hand. The patient noted that trimming the nails of the L index and middle fingers was associated with substantial pain and because of the difficulties with her L hand she experiences great difficulty in attempting to trim the nails of her R hand. The patient noted that she was unable to wring a cloth because of the painful condition of her L hand. The patient indicated that some days because of swelling of her L hand she is unable to wear a watch on the area of her L wrist. The patient reported experiencing "burning" and "scalding" pain when the palm of the L hand contacts an object. The patient reported experiencing pain in her L hand simply with motion of the digits of the hand. Ms. Heitzenrater noted that recently it had been necessary for her to work on a nursing unit and she was unable to unscrew the cap from a portion of an IV infusion system.

EX: On inspection of the L hand, there was felt to be subtle fullness of the tissues on its dorsal aspect. On stroking the pads of the digits of the L hand, the patient indicated that of L 1 was numb, that of L 2 was numb and painful, that of L 3 was numb, and those of L 4 and 5 had normal sensation. Tenderness was elicited on palpation on the radial side of L 3. Its ulnar side was not tender. [The patient pointed out the finding that one side of L 3 was tender while its other side was not.] Tenderness was elicited on stroking the skin in the radial portion of the palm of the L hand and the skin overlying the thenar muscles. There was some tenderness on stroking the skin on the palmar aspect of the L wrist. A surgical scar was present in that area. The patient demonstrated good active ranges of motion on extension of the four fingers of the L hand. On having the patient actively flex the fingers of the L hand, there was a mild impairment of flexion of L 3 and a mild to moderate impairment of flexion of L 2. When the examiner attempted to fully flex L 2 and 3, the patient indicated this was associated with pain. An infrared themometer was used to measure the temperatures of the palms of the L and R hands which were respectively 97 degrees F and 98 degrees F.

DX: 1. Post surgical injury of the L median nerve in the area of the L carpal tunnel. 955.1

2. Altered sensation involving the radial three digits of the L hand related to #1. 782.0

3. Pain and painful sensitivity of the area of the radial portion of the palm of the L hand and the palmar aspect of the L wrist. 729.5/782.0

RX: I had a discussion with the patient and her husband who accompanied her. I indicated that with current technology there was no cure for the difficulties which she experiences with her L hand. I did suggest that the patient again use Neurontin but gradually increase the dose from 1 tablet a day up to the equivalent of 20 tablets a day. The patient was provided with a prescription for Neurontin 100 mg to be used once a day and every three days the patient was to increase the dose by 1 tablet a day. The patient was provided today with prescriptions for Oxycontin 10 mg and Percocet 5 mg. The patient had last received prescriptions for these two medications at the time of the 10/6/03 visit. The patient noted that during periods of increased pain use of 1 Percocet 5 mg tablet does not provide her with an adequate degree of pain relief. I suggested that the patient at those times use 2 of the Percocet 5 mg tablets. I noted that even if the patient used 8 Percocet 5 mg tablets a day that the dose of Tylenol which she receives would be less than the recommended maximum of 4 g a day.

The patient was to again be examined in several months when tentatively she will be in Pittsburgh for follow-up following bariatric surgery. A copy of these notes will be sent to Attorney Segmiller. RGK/cd

HX: The patient had last been examined on 4/1. On questioning the patient in regard to the bone spurs in her feet, she indicated that the ultrasound treatment had failed to resolve this and on 6/18 she was to undergo surgical treatment of her L foot.

The patient indicated that following the last examination she had again tried to use Neurontin and had again experienced nausea. The patient making reference to her L hand indicated, "It has a lot more pain." The patient indicated that "at times" she experiences swelling of what would be the radial-dorsal aspect of her L hand and when this occurs she experiences itching in that area. The patient indicated that she has found it necessary to use Percocet 5 mg more frequently than was previously the case to relieve pain experience in her L hand and she has found that she needs to use 2 of the tablets at a time. The patient indicated that during the last month she has found it necessary to use Oxycontin 10 mg at bedtime to relieve pain. On questioning, the patient indicated she is not working because of the difficulties with her feet.

It is not clear why the matter arose but the patient is using Demadex 40 mg to treat her hypertension condition. The patient noted that this is a diuretic.

EX: On examination of the L hand, there was noted to be a mild degree of swelling of the soft tissues in the area of the radial portion of the dorsal aspect of that hand in the area lying radial to the metacarpal of L 3. With effort and experiencing pain, the patient demonstrated good active ranges of motion on flexion of the four fingers of the L hand. The surgical scar present in the area of the palmar aspect of the L wrist was not tender when stroked. The patient indicated it was painful when the examiner stroked the surgical scar in the palm of the L hand and the adjacent skin. On stroking the pads of the five digits of the L hand, the patient reported experiencing numbness/pain with respect to the pads of L 1, 2, and the radial portion of that of L 3. The patient indicated sensation was normal in the ulnar portion of the pad of L 3 and in the pads of L 4 and 5.

RX: I had no major new suggestions to make to Ms. Heitzenrater in regard to her L hand. I suggested use of Atarax 10 mg 3 times a day on those occasions when she experiences itching of the area of the dorsal aspect of her L hand. Whether this will be of any benefit is not certain. Atarax is used by dermatologists to treat itching related to various dermatological disorders. The patient during the discussion noted that she tends to rub and scratch the skin where she experiences itching. I noted that the patient did have lichenification of the skin in the area of the dorsal aspect of her R forearm from repeatedly rubbing that area. I prescribed use of triamcinolone cream .5% to be applied to the various areas of skin which the patient has irritated by rubbing.

The patient today was provided with prescriptions for Percocet 5 mg and Oxycontin 10 mg which she will mail to a mail-order pharmacy.

Sponge, needle, instrument counts correct.

FINDINGS: Mary Heitzenrater at the time of surgery was noted to have a thickened transverse carpal ligament causing significant compression of the median nerve. No significant adhesions or scarring was noted.

PROCEDURE: Mary Heitzenrater was taken to the operating room on 4/27/00, placed into supine position on the operating room table, administered Bier block to left upper extremity, prepped and draped in the usual fashion for surgery for left wrist and hand. Incision was marked in the left palm in line with the long finger from the level of the flexion crease of the thumb down to the base of the thenar eminence, incised through the skin down to the level of the subcutaneous tissues. Hemostasis was obtained with electrocautery, dissection was carried downward to the superficial palmar fascia to the underlying transverse carpal ligament. The ligament was incised throughout the length of the incision and using a spread technique above and below the ligament proximal and distal, push technique distal down below the padding of the palmar arch in proximal and ulnar ward direction. The transverse carpal ligament was released, decompressing the median nerve. Next a pair of Adson and Littler utilized to perform segmental epineural lysis after which the wound was irrigated. Upon hemostasis obtained with bipolar cautery. The skin was approximated with horizontal mattress sutures of 6-0 nylon. Sterile dressing was applied followed by a volar plaster of Paris splint. Drapes removed and the tourniquet deflated and removed form the arm. The patient was transported to the recovery room in stable satisfactory postoperative condition.

ELECTRODIAGNOSTIC REPORT

Martin A. Schaeffer, M.D.
RE: Heitzenrater, Mary
02/11/00

DISCUSSION

The patient is a 43-year-old, right-hand dominant female who presents with a chief complaint of left hand pain. The patient reports approximately 2 - 3 months ago she began to develop left hand pain and reports no accidents or unusual activities at that time. The patient states it is a dull pain occurring in the left hand region which comes and goes with radiation to her left palm and left # 1 through 3 digits. The patient states it increases with computer work and decreases with rest. The patient states she has associated decreased sensation noted in this area as well and it occasionally wakens her at night. The patient denies any left shoulder pain or neck pain complaints or proximal upper extremity left-sided complaints or any right upper extremity complaints or bilateral lower extremity complaints. Past medical history is significant for chronic low back pain and patient is status post low back surgery July of last year. The patient states she also has some difficulty with her eyes as well. The patient denies any fever, chills, sweats, nausea, vomiting or diarrhea. Other standard review of systems are negative. Past medical history is significant for chronic low back pain status post discectomy July of 1999. The patient also has a history of COPD, hypertension, borderline diabetes, and depression due to above surgical intervention and chronic complaints. Current medications include Accupril 80 mg p.o.q.d., Dyazide 2 p.o.q.d., Accolate 10 mg p.o.b.i.d., ? stomach pill q.d., Percocet p.r.n. low back pain, Darvocet p.r.n. back pain, Albuterol MDI b.i.d., Servent MDI p.r.n. and Paxil 20 mg p.o.q.d. The patient has no known drug allergies. Family history - father passed away due to myocardial infarction June of 1999. Mother is alive at age 80 reportedly in poor health with a history of depression and coronary artery disease. Social history - patient lives with husband and two children, denies cigarette intake, drinks alcohol rarely. The patient denies any hobbies, is an RN and currently works at Christ the King Manor and has been there for approximately six years. On physical examination, the patient presents as an overweight, well-developed appearing female appearing stated age in no apparent distress. The patient is pleasant, cooperative, alert, awake, and oriented. HEENT revealed normocephalic, atraumatic. Cranial nerves II through XII are grossly intact. Manual muscle testing of the bilateral upper extremities revealed 5/5 strength appreciated throughout. There was no gross atrophy noted. There was no increased tone noted. Sensory examination revealed light touch to be intact bilateral upper extremities with no side-to-side variance noted. Reflexes were normoreflexic and symmetric. There was a positive left Phalen's and left reverse Phalen's in the region of the carpal tunnel. There was negative left nerve percussion test and nerve compression test. Lower extremity and low back examination was deferred. Mobility and transfers were independent. Ambulation without assistive devices was without gross deficit.

IMPRESSION

Electrodiagnostic testing was performed on 02/11/00. Nerve conduction study of the left upper extremity was significant for an increased distal latency seen in the left median motor nerve as well as comparatively prolonged distal latency seen in the left median sensory nerve. There was within normal limits distal latency seen in left ulnar and radial motor and sensory nerves. There was within normal limits amplitude seen in all nerves tested. There was a comparatively decreased nerve conduction velocity seen in the left median motor nerve. There was within normal limits nerve conduction velocity seen in the left ulnar radial motor and sensory nerves. There was a decreased nerve conduction velocity seen in the left median sensory nerve. Left palmar response was unobtainable. Left upper extremity F wave testing was within normal limits. Electromyographic testing of selected left upper extremity musculature as indicated on report was significant for no evidence of either acute or chronic denervation. The patient did have difficulty tolerating needle insertions.

CONCLUSION

Electrodiagnostic testing was consistent with left median nerve entrapment in the region of the carpal tunnel, moderate to severe based upon comparative values, affecting motor and sensory components, affecting primarily myelin components, with no associated electromyographic evidence seen of denervation. Treatment options were discussed with patient with regard to surgical versus non-surgical intervention. Will proceed with conservative treatment and have written for brace as well as vitamin supplementation. Did review with patient stretching exercises as well. Patient had questions which were answered.

ELECTRODIAGNOSTIC REPORT

Martin A. Schaeffer, M.D.
RE: Heitzenrater, Mary

IMPRESSION

Electrodiagnostic testing was performed on 08/23/00. Results of electrodiagnostic testing were compared with previous electrodiagnostic testing of 02/11/00. Nerve conduction study of the left upper extremity was significant for an upper limits of normal distal latency seen in the left median motor nerve and an unobtainable left median sensory nerve despite multiple stimulation attempts. There was within normal limits nerve conduction velocity seen in the left ulnar and radial motor and sensory nerves. The unobtainable nature of the left median sensory nerve was a new finding compared with previous testing. There was a decreased amplitude seen in the left median motor nerve which again represented a new finding compared with previous electrodiagnostic testing. There was within normal limits nerve conduction velocity seen in the left median, ulnar, and radial motor nerves as well as the left ulnar and radial sensory nerves. Left upper extremity F wave testing was within normal limits throughout, however, there was an increase seen in the left median F wave. Electromyographic testing of left APB musculature was significant for evidence of fibrillation potentials as well as polyphasic potentials, however, patient did have significant pain complaints. Further electromyographic testing was deferred due to this.

CONCLUSION

Electrodiagnostic testing was consistent with a left median nerve compression in the region of the carpal tunnel, severe, affecting motor and sensory components, affecting myelin and axonal components with associated electromyographic evidence seen of denervation and reinnervation. In comparison with previous electrodiagnostic testing of 02/11/00 this represents a worsening of the median nerve neuropathy. There continued to be no generalized electrodiagnostic evidence seen suggestive otherwise of a generalized polyneuropathy.

OPERATIVE REPORT

HEITZENRATER, MARY
REG. #: 0038688925
UNIT #: 696370
DATE OF OR: 09/29/2000
SURGEON: JOSEPH E. IMBRIGLIA, M.D.
ASST.: DAVID ROBERT MILLER, M.D.

PREOPERATIVE DIAGNOSIS: Likely transection of the common digital nerve to the index finger on the left.

POSTOPERATIVE DIAGNOSIS: Neuroma in continuity of the median nerve to the left likely involving the fibers to the index finger.

OPERATION: Exploration of the median nerve, neurolysis, posterior interosseous nerve graft bypass interpositioning for the median nerve transected fibers.

ANESTHESIA: Axillary block with local and sedation.

ESTIMATED BLOOD LOSS: Minimal.

COMPLICATIONS: None.

JUSTIFICATION FOR PROCEDURE: The patient is a 44-year-old female who presented complaining of left index finger numbness occurring immediately after recent small incision open carpal tunnel release. The patient reports that immediately after the surgery she had no feeling in her index finger. At physical exam the patient was noted to be completely insensate in her index, likely a laceration of the common digital nerve to the index finger or proximal to that. She was consented for surgical intervention after the risks and benefits were explained.

PROCEDURE: She was brought to the OR, left upper extremity was prepped and draped in the usual sterile fashion after axillary block anesthesia was obtained. Local infiltration of Lidocaine was obtained. Local infiltration of a 5.5 cm incision we dissected carefully down, identified a significant amount of scar encasing the median nerve. Neurolysis was performed of the median nerve and all of the branches distally. Once this was complete, the epineurium of the median nerve was opened, and fascicles were dissected out carefully throughout the entire nerve under loupe magnification. We identified an area of a neuroma in continuity which appeared to be fascicles leading to the common digital nerve of the index finger. Since there were areas that were unsure of whether complete continuity was maintained, we tried for bypass grafting the area with posterior interosseous nerve graft, so once the ends were dissected out clearly and the neurolysis was complete, we turned the wrist over and through approximately a 5 cm incision dissected carefully down, identified the fourth extensor compartment. This was elevated and the posterior interosseous nerve was identified and approximately 2.5 cm was resected. The wound was then irrigated in that area and closed at a central retinaculum of the fourth compartment using 2-0 absorbable, and then the skin was closed with 4-0 nylon in a running fashion. Next, under loupe magnification and using 9-0 nylon, the bypass graft was performed to connect the transected fascicles noted in the median nerve, bypassing the neuroma in continuity present. Another small area where there appeared to be a laceration of one of the fascicles was also bypass grafted using the remaining posterior interosseous nerve graft. The wound was then thoroughly irrigated. The wound ends were sutured, and the fat graft was placed over top of the repair. The skin was closed with 4-0 nylon in a running fashion, and the patient was to recovery room in stable condition, tolerated the procedure well.

Dear Ms. Heitzenrater:

I have been in practice since 1978 and have decided to retire and close my practice effective November 1, 2005. After that date it will be necessary for you to receive hand surgery care from another physician. I do not have any specific recommendations in that regard. I am willing to discuss possible options for care with you. If necessary you may contact the Referral Service of the Allegheny County Medical Society at 412-321-5030. A copy of the important portions of your office chart can be sent to another physician.

I thank you for the opportunity to have treated you. I wish you well.

Sincerely Yours,

Richard Katz

HEITZENRATER, MARY C.

1/28/02

HX: The patient is a 45-year-old R hand dominant woman who previously worked as a registered nurse at Christ the King Manor Nursing Home which is a 220-bed nursing home. Ms. Heitzenrater worked in the skilled nursing unit where the patients had I.V.'s, tracheotomies, and other problems requiring skilled care. Ms. Heitzenrater indicated that her job activities involved starting I.V.'s, drawing blood samples, and supervising the staff of the unit.

The patient brought with her copies of reports of electrodiagnostic studies she had undergone on 2/11/00 and 8/23/00. These studies had been performed by Dr. Schaeffer. In addition, the patient had brought a copy of the operative report concerning a procedure performed on 9/29/00 by Dr. Imbriglia.

The patient was evaluated by Dr. Schaeffer on 2/11/00 and his office note indicates that the patient's chief complaint was that of L hand pain which had its onset approximately two to three months previously. The pain was experienced in the patient's L hand and involved L 1-3. The patient also noted diminished sensation in this area and this would occasionally awaken her at night. Although the worksheet portion of Dr. Schaeffer's evaluation was not available, he concluded that the distal latencies of the sensory and motor portions of the L median nerve were prolonged and the electromyographic testing "of selected left upper extremity musculature" revealed no evidence of acute or chronic denervation. Dr. Schaeffer concluded that the patient was experiencing entrapment of the L median nerve in the region of the L carpal tunnel of a moderate to severe degree.

In April of 2000 the patient had undergone release of the carpal tunnel of her L hand performed by Dr. Zeliger. The patient indicated that Dr. Zeliger had made a "tiny incision" in what would be the proximal portion of the palm of her L hand and that only two sutures had been placed to close the wound. The patient indicated that postoperatively she experienced "terrible burning pain" and a "knot" in the palm of her L hand. At one point a Medrol Dosepak [this is a several-day course of a potent steroid medication] had been prescribed. The patient indicated her

L hand "kept swelling and changing color" and that she had experienced difficulty in flexing the fingers of her L hand, especially the L index finger.

The patient had undergone a second electrodiagnostic evaluation by Dr. Schaeffer on 8/23/00. In his report concerning that study he noted that the distal latency of the motor portion of the L median nerve was at the upper limits of normal and no response could be stimulated in the sensory portion of the L median nerve in spite of multiple stimulation attempts. The amplitude of the impulses in the motor portion of the L median nerve were noted to be diminished compared the situation at the time of the 2/11/00 evaluation. On electromyographic testing of the L abductor policis brevis muscle [this is innervated by the L median nerve], there was evidence of fibrillation potentials as well as polyphasic potentials. Dr. Schaeffer concluded the 8/23/00 electrodiagnostic evaluation was "consistent with a left median nerve compression in the region of the carpal tunnel, severe, affecting motor and sensory components, affecting myelin and axonal components with associated electromygraphic evidence seen of denervation and reinervation. In comparison with previous electrodiagnostic testing of 02/11/00 this represents a worsening of the left median neuropathy." The patient indicated that Dr. Schaeffer recommended that she be evaluated by Dr. Imbriglia.

The patient indicated that when she was evaluated by Dr. Imbriglia he had felt that her L median nerve had been "cut." She indicated he advised her that the nerve "can't be fixed but I think I can help you." On 9/29/00 Dr. Imbriglia undertook surgical treatment of the patient's L hand. On review of the operative report concerning the procedure, the report was dictated by Dr. David Miller who apparently assisted Dr. Imbriglia, the preoperative diagnosis was "likely transection of the common digital nerve to the index finger on the left" and the postoperative diagnosis was "neuroma in continuity of the median nerve to the left likely involving the fibers to the index finger." The title of the operation was "Exploration of the median nerve, neurolysis, posterior interosseous nerve graft bypass interpositioning for the median nerve transected fibers." In the "Justification for Procedure" section of the operative report, it was noted that the patient had complained of "left index finger numbness occurring immediately after a recent small incision open carpal tunnel release. The patient reports that immediately after the surgery she had no feeling in her L index finger. At physical exam the patient was noted to be completely insensate in her index, likely a laceration of the common digital nerve to the index finger or proximal to that." In the description of the operative procedure, after the epineurium of the L median nerve was opened, "we identified an area of a neuroma in continuity which appeared to be fascicles leading to the common digital nerve of the index finger." A segment of the L posterior interosseous nerve was harvested and used as a nerve graft. The operative report indicates, "...the bypass graft was performed to connect the transected fascicles noted in the median nerve, bypassing the neuroma in continuity present. Another small area where there appeared to be a laceration of one of the fascicles also was bypass grafted using the remaining posterior interosseous graft."

I questioned Ms. Heitzenreiter in regard to difficulties currently experienced with her L hand. The patient reported experiencing a sensation in her L index finger as if that area is being jabbed. She noted that the skin in the operative area in the palm of her L hand and the skin overlying the thenar muscles of her L thumb is painfully sensitive. The patient indicated that the current area of painful sensitivity of the palm of her L hand is the same as was the situation following the first operative procedure. The patient noted that sensation was altered in her L thumb, that the whole of her L index finger was numb, that sensation was altered in the radial portion of her L middle finger and slightly altered in the ulnar portion of that finger, and that sensation was normal in her L ring finger.

The patient indicated that she tends not to use her L index finger and that the finger has "no strength." The patient reported that because of inability to feel with her L hand the individual sheets of paper in medical charts at work she has difficulty turning the pages of charts using that hand. The patient indicated that even though the radial three digits of her L hand are numb she nevertheless experiences pain in those digits and she indicated that the pain in L 2 is severe. The patient indicated that when simultaneously extending and abducting the fingers of her L hand she experiences pain in the palm of that hand. The patient reported that on occasion she experiences swelling of the area of the dorsal aspect of her L hand. The patient indicated the pain experienced in her L hand interferes with sleep.

The patient reported that Neurontin had been prescribed by Dr. Schaeffer and that this had been of no help in relieving the pain experienced in her L hand. In addition, the medication caused some sedation. The patient reported that use of Oxycontin 10 mg twice a day along with use of Percocet decreased her alertness. The patient indicated that she had asked Dr. Imbriglia about a course of sympathetic nerve blocks for her L upper extremity. She indicated he did not recommend such treatment. The patient had been evaluated at the Pain Clinic of the Dubois Regional Medical Center, I believe the patient indicated she had been evaluated by Dr. Belacowski [the spelling of the physician's name may not be correct] and the physician doubted that she was experiencing a reflex sympathetic dystrophy condition involving her L upper extremity.

The patient on questioning reported that she had returned to work, primarily using her R hand, two days following the April 2000 operative procedure. Following the September 2000 operative procedure, the patient was off work for a period of one week and then returned to work to an administrative job position.

PMH: ADVERSE MEDICATION REACTIONS: None. MEDICATIONS: Demadex, a diuretic, used to control hypertension. Accupril was used to control blood pressure. The patient used Singular and another inhaler. Celexa, Aciphex, and Glucophage were used. The patient indicated Glucophage was used for weight control and to treat polycystic ovaries. TOBACCO USE: None. ALCOHOL USE: The patient rarely consumed alcoholic beverages. HOSPITALIZATIONS: To undergo a cesarean section, to undergo a lumbar dissectomy in approximately 2000, for treatment of chronic obstructive pulmonary disease/asthma, and for treatment of sleep apnea. REVIEW OF SYSTEMS was remarkable for a history of hypertension.

EX: On examination of the L upper extremity, there was a 5.5 cm-long longitudinally scar on the dorsal aspect of the distal portion of the L forearm in approximately the area of the midline of the forearm. The scar was not tender when stroked with the examiner's thumbnail. There was no apparent swelling of the soft tissues on the dorsal aspect of the L hand.

There was a scar having a chevron configuration on the palmar aspect of the L wrist having a length of approximately 2 cm. The distal end of this scar joined a scar in the palm of the L hand lying near the thenar crease. This latter scar had a length of approximately 5 cm. On stroking the pads of the radial three digits of the L hand while simultaneously stroking those of the R hand, there was felt to be abnormal dryness of the pads of the indicated three digits of the L hand. There was some moistness of the pads of L 4 and 5. On stroking individually the pads of the five digits of the L hand while simultaneously stroking the corresponding digit of the R hand, the patient indicated that sensation was altered in the L thumb, substantially altered in the L index and middle fingers, and was slightly altered in the radial portion of the pad of the L ring finger. Sensation was normal in the ulnar portion of the pad of the L ring finger and in the pad of the L small finger. There was a hint of atrophy of the soft tissues in the area of the distal phalanx of the L index finger. It was possible to passively flex the L index finger to a fairly good degree. When performing this maneuver, there was noted to be some tone present in the extensor tendons of L 2. The patient reported experiencing some pain when the examiner passively flexed L 2. The patient was able to demonstrated a fairly good active range of motion on flexion of the L index finger.

The patient tolerated having the examiner rub the cutaneous scar in the palm of the L hand and gently stroke that scar using the examiner's thumbnail. On tapping over the scar, a Tinel's sign was elicited in the area of the distal portion of the scar. The patient indicated that the sensation which was experienced did not radiate distally.

The patient's grip strength values using Handle Spacing II of the grip meter were 40 lbs. for the R hand and 12 lbs. for the L hand. The patient withheld the L index finger from the handles of the grip meter when demonstrating the grip strength of the L hand.

DX: 1. Post laceration of several fascicles of the L median nerve in the area of the L carpal tunnel occurring at the time of the 4/27/00 operative procedure. 955.1/998.8

HEITZENRATER, MARY C.

2. Altered sensation involving the radial 3½ digits of the L hand related to #1. 782.0

3. Pain experienced in the area of the L hand related to #1. 729.5

RX: I had a discussion with Ms. Heitzenrater and her husband who accompanied her. I did not believe that any additional surgical treatment of the patient's L median nerve in the area of the carpal tunnel of her L hand would be of any benefit either in diminishing the pain experienced in her L hand or in improving the quality of sensation present in the affected digits of that hand. After examining the patient on one occasion I was not of the opinion that she was experiencing a reflex sympathetic dystrophy condition [the current term for this is complex regional pain condition, type II] involving her L hand.

I did suggest to the patient that she attempt to minimize holding her L index finger in extension and excluding that digit from use. I demonstrated for the patient how to gently perform passive flexion exercises for her L index finger. I also felt the patient could loosely buddy-tape her L index finger to her L middle finger in an effort to overcome her habit of holding her L index finger in extension. This has undoubtedly developed because of the degree of alteration in sensation and the painful quality of sensation affecting that finger. Although not recorded in my handwritten notes, I believe I may well have suggested to the patient that she gently massage her L index finger and other painfully sensitive areas of her L hand in an effort to diminish the painful sensitivity of those areas. Why such massage on occasion may be effective in diminishing painful sensitivity of nerve origin of an area is not clear. I did suggest that the patient might gently perform gripping exercises for her L hand and I suggested that she simply gently squeeze a clean folded sock.

In regard to pain medication, I suggested that the patient use Oxycontin 10 mg but that at least initially she use it only at bedtime. The patient had reported that when previously using Oxycontin it had affected her alertness. Obviously, if the medication causes some sedation at night this is not a liability and actually is of some benefit. Assuming that the patient's nervous system becomes tolerant for the sedating effects of Oxycontin, later she may be able to use the medication during the daytime portion of a day and not experience sedation.

I discussed with the patient the matter of whether there was evidence that Dr. Zeliger had injured her L median nerve at the time of the 4/27/00 operative procedure. I advised the patient that it was my opinion after reading the operative note dictated in association with the 9/29/00 operative procedure that there was clear evidence that several of the fascicles of the L median nerve in the area of her L carpal tunnel had been previously lacerated and that was the reason that Dr. Imbriglia had placed nerve grafts in an effort to restore continuity to the injured nerve fascicles. Inasmuch as the median nerve in the area of the carpal tunnel is relatively deeply situated and the patient had not suffered any laceration injury of that area prior to the 4/00 operative procedure, the only explanation for the injury of the indicated nerve fascicles is that they were damaged at the time of the 4/00 operative procedure. Such an injury of a median nerve occurring at the time of a carpal tunnel release is below the appropriate standard of care.

Because the patient does reside a substantial travel distance from Pittsburgh, she was not given a specific return appointment at this time. She was invited to call me if she had any additional questions or concerns. At her request, a copy of these notes will be sent to Attorney John Perry. RGK/cd

ASSOCIATES IN NEUROLOGY OF PITTSBURGH
A Professional Corporation

MARY HEITZENRATER

3/30/06: Office visit. Mary underwent left carpal tunnel repair on 4/27/00 by Dr. Zellinger through a limited incision. I do not think it was done by scope but rather by a small incision. She developed severe burning pain after it was over and sought a second opinion from Joe Imbriglia. She had had an uneventful right carpal tunnel before.

In reading Dr. Imbriglia's notes, he felt that a neuroma had formed at the site of surgery indicative of at least some interruption of nerve fascicles post surgery. He attempted to "re-hook up the nerve" using a transplant from a nerve in the dorsum of her hand. According to her, it has helped only minimally. She has burning pain in her hand. It is stiff and she is not able to use it even for typing. On occasion, it will feel cold and rarely will discolor. She has had physical therapy post surgery without relief.

On exam, she has weakness of her entire left hand. It is warm to touch. It is not discolored. It is not swollen. She is very sensitive to tapping the left carpal tunnel with a reflex hammer.

I began her on Lyrica 75 b.i.d. for pain. I told her to avoid narcotic analgesics. I gave her a hand exercising device called Tangle and have told her to use this while watching television or when inactive to keep her left hand mobile. I warned her against disuse in her left hand which could make her problem worse.

Re: Heitzenrater matter

Dear Ms. Segmiller:

I have comprehensively reviewed the medical records and the deposition testimonies (see Appendix A) relating to your client, Ms. Mary C Heitzenrater that have been provided to me. As a Board-Certified neurological surgeon (1985) and a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons (1991), I have been in the practice of neurological surgery for 23+ years. Accordingly, I am very familiar with, and therefore I believe qualified to discuss, the diagnosis and treatment of patients with a carpal tunnel syndrome, and any complication resulting from surgical management, thereof.

My professional opinions proffered within a reasonable degree of medical certainty are based entirely on those records and those studies that you have submitted for my review. These are as follows:

- Ms. Heitzenrater presented on April 18 2000 to Keith Zeliger, DO with electrodiagnostically-confirmed left-sided carpal tunnel syndrome, documented by Dr. Martin A Schaeffer.
- Ms. Heitzenrater elected to proceed with "surgical decompression of her median nerve" which was performed by Dr. Zeliger at Dubois Regional Medical Center on April 27, 2000.
- Postoperatively, Joseph E Imbriglia, MD of Western Pennsylvania Hand and Trauma Center assessed Ms. Heitzenrater. On September

14, 2000 Dr. Imbriglia noted complaints of "increasing numbness in [illegible] she also reports no sensation in the index [illegible] His impression was "s/p open carpal tunnel release with likely common digital nerve to the index finger laceration."

- Dr. Imbriglia performed an "Exploration of the median nerve, neurolysis, posterior interosseous nerve graft bypass interpositioning for the median nerve transected fibers" on Ms. Heitzenrater on September 29, 2000 at Shadyside Hospital. He identified at surgery "an area of a neuroma in continuity which appeared to be fascicles leading to the common digital nerve of the index finger."
- Ms. Heitzenrater was assessed by Richard Katz, MD of Pittsburgh PA on January 28, 2002 for "difficulties currently experienced with her left hand." He assessed "1. Post laceration of several fascicles of the L median nerve in the area of the L carpal tunnel occurring at the time of the 4/27/00 operative procedure; 2. Altered sensation involving the radial 3 ½ digits of the L hand related to # 1; 3. Pain experienced in the area of the L hand related to # 1." Over the course of the next 2 years Dr. Katz reported that Ms. Heitenrater "indicated that there has been no change in the condition of her L hand."
- In his deposition testimony taken on July 7, 2004 Dr. Zeliger discussed the technique he employs for surgery in carpal tunnel syndrome. While the technique as described is within the acceptable standard of care, his execution of that technique in his care of Ms. Heitzenrater which resulted in the neuroma of continuity failed to meet that acceptable standard.

I reserve the right to amend this report should further information become available that would warrant my doing so. All of the opinions herein, thus far, expressed have been stated within a reasonable degree of medical certainty.

Sincerely,

Bennett Blumenkopf, MD

RE: Mary Heitzenrater Vs. Keith Zeligar, D.O.

Dear Attorney Johnson:

I am writing in response to your request for my opinion regarding the care provided by Dr. Keith Zeligar to Mary Heitzenrater. I had the opportunity to review all of the medical records, including the records of Dr. Zeligar, Dr. Imbriglia, Dr. Shaffer, Dr. Bellimo, Dr. Katz, Dubois Regional Medical Center, and Shadyside Hospital, and a deposition transcript of Mary Heitzenrater taken April 11, 2005. I have reviewed Dr. Zeligar's Deposition.

In brief, Ms. Heitzenrater came to Dr. Zeligar for treatment of numbness in her left hand. She had nerve conduction studies on February 11, 2000, that were consistent with left carpal tunnel syndrome. She subsequently had a left carpal tunnel release on April 27, 2000. She was able to return to work two days after her surgery. It subsequently became apparent that she had a lacerated common digital nerve. Dr. Joseph Imbriglia performed an interposition nerve graft on September 29, 2000. Postoperatively she developed some signs and symptoms consistent with reflex sympathetic dystrophy. She was treated for that. She was evaluated in February of 2001 at Dubois Regional Medical Center. She had static and touch pressure testing performed. The dorsal surface of her hand had the same readings of diminished sensation to light touch throughout all fingers both in the median and ulnar nerve distribution. On the palmar side, her static and touch pressure were diminished in the thumb, middle, and half of the ring finger. They were also diminished in the ring and small finger, and again in the ulnar nerve distribution. Those were the most recent medical records that I had to review.

With regard to the care provided by Dr. Zeligar, the indications for the surgery were excellent. Nonoperative treatment had been tried and was not successful. The nerve conduction studies clearly showed evidence of carpal tunnel syndrome. Dr. Zeligar completed a consent form that Ms. Heitzenrater signed on April 18, 2000, which clearly outlined the risk of neurovascular injury and reflex sympathetic dystrophy. Ms. Heitzenrater has a history of both hypertension and diabetes. It is clear that the results of nerve surgery are not as predictable in a person with medical problems. This is particularly true of patients that have diabetes. It was clear in Dr. Zeligar's deposition that he frequently does carpal tunnel surgery. He performed these with a loupe magnification, which exceeds the standard of care. It is clear that Ms. Heitzenrater sustained a partial nerve injury. Her postoperative course was complicated by the fact that she seemed to initially show signs of improvement that would have been consistent with a slowly recovering nerve. When she did not improve, nerve conduction studies were repeated on August 23, 2000. These were felt to be consistent with a worsening neuropathy but not clearly a nerve transection.

It is my opinion that Dr. Zeligar's initial evaluation and surgical treatment met the standard of care. He had warned Ms. Heitzenrater about the possibility of nerve injury. It is my opinion that nerve injury during nerve surgery is a recognized complication.

These are all opinions that I state within a reasonable degree of medical certainty.

Clearfield, PA 16830

Dear Judge Ammerman:

Subsequent to sending my motion for protective order to the Court, the parties were able to arrive at an agreement concerning the deposition of plaintiff's expert, subject to the Court's approval. If the Court approves the order of court appended to the joint motion, it would moot the motion for protective order submitted earlier today.

The original of the joint motion for supplemental order of court is being filed with the Prothonotary.

Thank you.

Very truly yours,

JOINT MOTION FOR SUPPLEMENTAL ORDER OF COURT

NOW COME the parties by their respective attorneys and file the following motion jointly for a supplemental order of court for the reasons set forth below.

1. This court entered a pretrial order on December 3, 2007 requiring all objections to depositions to be made 30 days before trial. Trial is scheduled to begin April 21, 2008.

2. Plaintiff has scheduled the deposition of plaintiff's expert, Dr. Blumenkopf for March 11, 2008 and defendants' counsel was unavailable that date.

3. Defense counsel filed a motion for protective order.

4. Plaintiff's attorney advises that Dr. Blumenkopf has limited availability for a deposition but can be deposed at 9:00 a.m. (or perhaps earlier) on March 31, 2008. That date is acceptable to the defendant, but is less than 30 days prior to the commencement of trial.

5. Accordingly, the parties jointly request that the court enter the attached order providing that Dr. Blumenkopf's deposition may be taken on March 31, 2008, that a transcript be made available within 2 days of that date and that any objections or related motions may be filed within 7 days of that date, and that any responses be filed by April 11, 2008.

6. Plaintiff's attorney has authorized undersigned counsel to file this motion as a joint motion.

WHEREFORE, the parties respectfully request entry of the attached order.

EMERGENCY MOTION FOR PROTECTIVE ORDER

NOW COME defendants, by their attorneys, Thomson, Rhodes & Cowie, P.C. and file the following emergency motion for protective order for the reasons set forth below.

1. This is a medical malpractice case scheduled to begin April 21, 2008. Plaintiffs have identified as an expert witness, Bennett Blumenkopf, M.D.

2. On February 21, 2008, without any previous notice or scheduling arrangements, undersigned counsel received the notice of Dr. Blumenkopf's deposition, scheduling his deposition for March 11, 2008. Immediately upon receipt of that notice, undersigned counsel advised plaintiff's attorney by letter dated February 21, 2008, attached hereto as Exhibit A, that undersigned counsel was starting a jury trial in Allegheny County on the day scheduled for Dr. Blumenkopf's deposition, and asked that the deposition be moved to a mutually convenient date.

3. Subsequently, telephone conversation ensued, without resolution of the issue. Following the pretrial conference in the Allegheny County case, in which it became apparent that the case would not resolve by way of settlement, plaintiff's counsel was advised of the continuing conflict and again requested to identify a mutually available date when Dr. Blumenkopf could be deposed.

4. Upon failure to receive a response to the most recent telephone call, plaintiff's counsel was notified by letter dated March 3, 2008, attached hereto as Exhibit B, is the most recent letter to plaintiff's counsel, to which no response has been received.

5. In this case, Dr. Blumenkopf is the only expert witness for the plaintiff.

6. In this case, undersigned counsel is the trial attorney for the defendants and, as a result, it is important for undersigned counsel to be available for any trial deposition of an expert.

WHEREFORE, defendants respectfully request that the court enter a protective order barring Dr. Blumenkopf's deposition from going forward on March 11, 2008 in view of the fact that undersigned counsel is scheduled for a jury trial in Allegheny County that date, and providing further that Dr. Blumenkopf's deposition shall only be rescheduled at a time that is available to the defendants' attorneys.

Dear Ms. Segmiller:

I today received your notice of videotape deposition for use at trial for Dr. Blumenkopf. Given the fact that it is a deposition for use at trial of your expert, I would have appreciated it if you would have consulted with me on timing before scheduling the deposition. As it turns out, the deposition is scheduled for March 11, 2008, the day I am beginning trial in another case, Evagues v. Somani. Thus, I am not available for a deposition at that time. I am requesting that you reschedule the deposition to a time when I am available. Would you please let me know right away whether you are willing to do so since, if you are not, it will be necessary for us to pursue a protective order.

Thank you.

MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

NOW COMES, DuBois Regional Medical Center, one of the defendants, by its attorneys, Thomson, Rhodes & Cowie, PC, and files this motion for summary judgment, in support of which the following is a statement.

I. FACTS

1. This is a medical malpractice action arising out of alleged negligence in connection with healthcare provided to plaintiff, Mary Heitzenrater, during a surgical procedure to her hand performed on April 27, 2000 at DuBois Regional Medical Center ("DRMC") by co-defendant Dr. Zeliger. Specifically, plaintiff underwent an operation to her left hand in the nature of a decompression of her left median nerve in the attempt to alleviate her ongoing symptoms from carpal tunnel disease.

2. Plaintiff alleges the defendants committed malpractice because, after the at-issue surgery, she experienced a loss of sensation in portions of her left hand which required additional medical/surgical interventions. Plaintiff claims a continued loss of functionality in her left hand, together with intermittent pain and numbness. The salient facts to the liability averments are outlined below.

(a) Beginning in approximately 1999, plaintiff began to experience increasing pain and consequent loss of function in her left hand that inhibited her activities of daily living. After treating with physicians and being diagnosed with carpal tunnel disease through EMG studies, plaintiff's primary care physician recommended to her that she consult a surgeon. (See plaintiff's deposition, p. 34).

(b) According to plaintiff's own testimony, she self-selected Dr. Zeliger to serve as her surgeon, stating that "I liked Dr. Zeliger. I had seen Dr. Zeliger prior to that when I started having trouble with my back." (See plaintiff's deposition, pp. 34-35).

(c) Per the direction of Dr. Zeliger, plaintiff entered DRMC on April 27, 2000 for the planned surgery on her left hand, which was ultimately performed by Dr. Zeliger. The surgery occurred as expected, and plaintiff was discharged from DRMC in a condition typical for someone who had recently underwent hand surgery.

(d) Post-operatively, the medical records document that plaintiff experienced prolonged pain, swelling and tenderness in her left hand, as well as difficulty in moving the digits of that hand. Subsequent diagnostic studies indicated nerve damage to her left hand.

(e) On September 29, 2000, plaintiff underwent a second surgery to her left hand performed by another physician. The given pre-operative diagnosis was that plaintiff had suffered a transection of the common digital nerve of the index finger of the left hand. Despite this reparative surgery, plaintiff claims to still experience problems in her left hand stemming from the nerve injury.

3. Plaintiff contends that the nerve injury occurred during the surgery performed by Dr. Zeliger, and that such injury occurred because of he improper execution of surgical technique and constitutes a breach of the standard of care.

4. The complaint filed by plaintiff is attached hereto as exhibit "A." It contains two Counts against the defendants.

(a) Count I - professional negligence against defendant Dr. Zeliger.

(b) Count II - a claim against DRMC for "corporate negligence" concerning a breach of the Thompson v. Nason Hospital duties of care (e.g., lack of adequate policies, failure to enforce policies, failure to retain competent and qualified physicians).

(c) Count II also appears to bring claims of vicarious liability against DRMC on the basis that, alternatively, Dr. Zeliger acted at the time of plaintiff's surgery as the actual or the ostensible agent of DRMC

II. GROUNDS FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

A. DRMC Cannot Be Vicariously Liable for the Conduct of Dr. Zeliger

5. In ¶ 22 of the complaint, plaintiff seeks recovery against DRMC on the theory that it stands vicariously liable for the conduct of Dr. Zeliger, since, throughout the period of plaintiff's at-issue medical care, he acted "within the line and scope of his employment with and in furtherance of the economic interests of [DRMC]." (See, complaint ¶ 22).

6. Then, in ¶ 25 of the complaint, plaintiff baldly alleges, without any buttressing facts or explanation, that she "was of a reasonable belief that the services furnished at [DRMC] were rendered to her for [DRMC]." Importantly, however, plaintiff does not specifically allege that she believed that Dr. Zeliger was acting as the employee or agent of DRMC.

7. Despite having engaged in extensive discovery since the filing of the complaint, no facts have been developed to support such allegations of agency (of the actual or ostensible variety), even if contained within the pleadings. There is no evidence that Dr. Zeliger acted as an employee or agent of DRMC in regards to the professional services he rendered to plaintiff.

8. To the contrary, at the time of the alleged incident, Dr. Zeliger acted not as an employee of DRMC but as an independently practicing physician. (See Dr. Zeliger's answer and new matter, ¶ 8). That Dr. Zeliger was not an employee of DRMC in the traditional sense in 2000 is a fact that cannot now be in dispute in this litigation. The only question is whether Dr. Zeliger can be deemed to be the ostensible agent of the hospital.

9. So as to hold DRMC vicariously responsible for the conduct of Dr. Zeliger, plaintiff has the burden to prove that Dr. Zeliger acted as its ostensible agent.

10. Under Pennsylvania law, the judicially created doctrine of ostensible agency finds applicability in very limited factual circumstances. Two elements must be established before a hospital can be charged with the negligence of its independent contractors or non-employees. First, the hospital must either hold the physician out as its employee or omit to act in some way so as to encourage the patient to adopt the reasonable belief that the treatment provided is being rendered by the hospital as an institution or by one of the hospital's own employees. Second, affirmative proof must be offered that the patient looked toward the hospital rather than the individual physician for the care and treatment that the physician provided. Capan v. Divine Providence Hospital, 430 A.2d 647 (Pa. Super. 1980); Parker v. Freilich, 803 A.2d 738 (Pa. Super. 2002).

11. As a predicate matter, plaintiff's own testimony given in this case belies any insinuation that she looked to DRMC as the employer of Dr. Zeliger. As she plainly stated (at pp. 34-35) she personally selected Dr. Zeliger because of the prior experience she had with him in treating her back condition. Importantly, this is not a situation where plaintiff went to the hospital and was assigned a physician with whom she did not share an existing relationship.

12. Moreover, at her deposition, plaintiff did not testify that she ever looked to DRMC as the employer of Dr. Zeliger or that she believed that the surgical services performed by Dr. Zeliger were actually being undertaken on behalf of DRMC.

13. Plaintiff has not produced any other affirmative evidence of looking toward DRMC as Dr. Zeliger's employer or that she relied upon DRMC to perform the surgery on her left hand. Similarly, there is absolutely no shred of evidence or facts that DRMC ever "held out" or represented Dr. Zeliger to plaintiff as its employee such that plaintiff could develop a reasonable belief that Dr. Zeliger acted as an employee of DRMC.

14. Without any evidence of plaintiff's belief and/or reliance that DRMC employed Dr. Zeliger, he cannot be deemed to have been ostensible agent of DRMC. And, even if plaintiff somehow believed (without any basis to do so) he was an employee, plaintiff lacks any evidence to prove any affirmative act on the part of DRMC that it portrayed or represented Dr. Zeliger to be its employee/agent. Without recourse to the ostensible agency concept, plaintiff is unable to make a prima facie case that UPMC St. Margaret stands vicariously liable for the conduct of Dr. Zeliger.

15. Accordingly, DRMC is entitled to summary judgment, as a matter of law, on Count II of the complaint as concerns its liability for any torts committed by Dr. Zeliger.

B. Count II Must Be Dismissed Since Plaintiff Has Not Offered Any Expert Reports/Opinions to Support Her Corporate Negligence Cause of Action Against DRMC

16. Count II of the complaint advances a corporate negligence theory of liability, which alleges that DRMC was negligent in the following areas:

> "(a) Failing to select and retain competent physicians; (b) Failing to oversee Dr. Zeliger; (c) Failing to provide adequate procedures and protocols to ensure that ... plaintiff's neurological deficits were properly ... documented; (d) Continuing to have its agents provide post-operative care ... without properly ... diagnosing plaintiff's neurological deficits ...; (e) Failing to properly monitor and to adequately chart the condition of the plaintiff; and (f) Failing to use reasonable care to ensure the competence of Dr. Zeliger."

See, complaint ¶ 27.

17. The above negligence averments are predicated upon facts pertaining to the medical treatment which this defendant provided to plaintiff and, thus, raise claims of professional negligence requiring expert testimony. Grossman v. Barke, 868 A.2d 561 (Pa. Super. 2005). Without expert testimony, plaintiff cannot state a prima facie case of direct corporate liability against this healthcare provider. Brillman v. Saylor, 761 A.2d 1208 (Pa. Super. 2000).

18. Plaintiff has not marshaled any facts to support the allegations made in Count II and set forth in the complaint. Plaintiff has not produced an expert report/opinion from a competent expert (or any expert) to support these allegations.

19. Attached as Exhibit "B" is the expert report of plaintiff's identified liability expert, Bennett Blumenkopf, M.D. To the extent Dr. Blumenkopf's opinion buttresses a cause of action against any defendant, that cause of action is against Dr. Zeliger, not DRMC. Indeed, reading through Dr. Blumenkopf's terse report, he does not identify any area of liability on the part of DRMC; he does not even mention DRMC. The entirety of his report is concerned with the diagnosis of plaintiff's alleged surgical complication and the purported failure of Dr. Zeliger to comply with the acceptable standard of care in executing his surgical technique. Under even the most expansive of interpretations, the report of Dr. Blumenkopf cannot serve as the basis to establish an independent liability claim against DRMC.

20. Accordingly, DRMC is entitled to summary judgment in its favor on Count II of the complaint.

WHEREFORE, DuBois Regional Medical Center, one of the defendants, respectfully requests that this Honorable Court issue an order granting summary judgment on all of the grounds raised in this motion for summary judgment and as noted in the proposed order of court attached hereto.

Respectfully Submitted,

At all relevant times, Defendant Zeliger was licensed to practice medicine in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and a doctor/patient relationship existed between Plaintiff and himself.

3. Defendant, Dubois Regional Medical Center ("Defendant Medical Center") is a health care facility operated and maintained for the purpose of serving the health care needs of the general public, including the Plaintiff, and has its principal place of business at Maple Avenue, DuBois, Clearfield County, Pennsylvania, 15801.

4. On or about February 11, 2000, Plaintiff had electrodiagnostic studies performed on her left hand and arm for pain and diminished sensation which would occasionally awaken her at night. It was concluded that the Plaintiff was experiencing entrapment of the left median nerve in the region of the left carpal tunnel of a moderate to severe degree.

5. Plaintiff was referred to Keith Zeliger, D.O. for carpal tunnel syndrome of her left hand.

7. Plaintiff post-operatively experienced terrible burning pain in the knot in the palm of her left hand. She indicated that her left hand kept swelling and changing color. She experienced difficulty in flexing the fingers of her left hand, especially the left index finger.

8. On or about August 23, 2000, a second electrodiagnostic evaluation was completed. The study noted a distal latency of the motor portion of the left median nerve. It was at the upper limits of normal and no response could be stimulated in the sensory portion of the left median nerve.

9. In comparison with the previous electrodiagnostic testing of February 11, 2000, the test represented a worsening of the left mediann neuropathy.

10. On or about September 29, 2000, a second surgical treatment was performed on the patient's left hand by another physician. Pre-operative diagnosis was transection of the common digital nerve to the index finger on the left.

11. The post-operative diagnosis was neuroma incontinuity of the median nerve to the left likely involving the fibers to the index finger. The operation was titled exploration of the median nerve, neurolysis, posterior interosseous nerve graph bypass interpositioning for the median nerve transected fibers.

12. At all times material and relevant, the recovery room and operating rooms at Defendant Medical Center were staffed by agents, servants and/or employees of Defendant Medical Center acting in the course and scope of their employment of their agency, authority or employment and in furtherance of Defendant Medical Center's business interest.

13. At all times material and relevant, Defendant Medical Center held out to Plaintiff, the operating room personnel and Defendant Zeliger as agents, servants and/or employees of Defendant Medical Center.

14. At all times material and relevant, Defendant Zeliger held himself out to the Plaintiff and to the general public as a highly skilled surgeon with extensive training and practical experience in the field of surgery, generally, and specifically in the field of carpal tunnel syndrome.

COUNT I - NEGLIGENCE

Plaintiff vs. Defendant Zeliger

15. The averments of Paragraphs 1-15 are incorporated herein by reference thereto as though fully set forth herein.

16. Defendant Zeliger, as a licensed physician, owe Plaintiff a duty to use reasonable care and to use such knowledge, skill and care as necessary for the proper treatment of Plaintiff consistent with accepted medical practice.

17. Defendant Zeliger breached that duty as follows:

a. In injuring Plaintiff's left median nerve at the time of the April 27, 2000 operative procedure;

b. In injuring several of the fascicles of the left median nerve in the area of her left carpal tunnel;

c. In injuring Plaintiff's median nerve at the time of the carpal tunnel release;

d. In failing to timely and properly diagnose Plaintiff's progressing neurological deficits;

e. In failing to timely and properly clinically manage and/or treat Plaintiff's post-operative course;

f. In failing to recognize the significance and implications of Plaintiff's post-operative neurological problems;

g. In failing to refer Plaintiff to a specialist so that her condition could have been diagnosed and treated promptly and accurately; and

h. In failing to recognize the significance and implications of lacerating the Plaintiff's median nerve.

18. As a result of these breaches of duty, the Plaintiff has suffered the following injuries and damages:

a. subsequent surgery for nerve grafts;

b. loss of sensation in her hand and fingers, specifically left index finger;

c. scarring;

d. laceration of several fascicles of the left median nerve in the area of the left carpal tunnel;

e. altered sensation involving the radial three and a half digits of the left hand;

f. pain in the area of the left hand;

g. atrophy of the left hand;

h. painful sensitivity of the left hand and fingers;

i. loss of strength to the Plaintiff's left hand and fingers;

j. numbness in the left hand and fingers;

k. depression; and

l. insomnia.

19. Because of these breaches of duty by Defendant Zeliger, Plaintiff has incurred medical, nursing and hospital expenses, past, present and future.

20. Because of these breaches of duty by Defendant Zeliger, Plaintiff has incurred lost wages, past, present and future.

21. Also because of these breaches of duty, Plaintiff has been deprived of the services, support, comfort, society, companionship, guidance and consortium of her husband and family.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff demands judgment against Defendant Zeliger in an amount in excess of the arbitrational limits of the Court of Common Pleas of Clearfield County, Pennsylvania.

JURY TRIAL DEMANDED.

COUNT II

Plaintiff vs. Defendant Medical Center

22. The averments of Paragraphs 1 through 22 are incorporated herein by reference thereto as though fully set forth herein.

23. At all times material to the facts alleged in this Complaint, Defendant Zeliger was acting within the line and scope of his employment with and in furtherance of the economic interests of the Defendant Medical Center.

24. At all times material to the facts alleged in this Complaint, Defendant Medical Center had a right to control the conduct of Defendant Zeliger and its agents, servants and/or employees in the performance of their work.

25. At all times material to the facts alleged in this Complaint, Plaintiff was of a reasonable belief that the services furnished at Defendant Medical Center were rendered to her for the Defendant Medical Center.

26. Defendant Medical Center had duties to the Plaintiff, among them being the duty to select and retain only competent physicians, the duty to oversee all persons who practice within its walls as to patient care and the duty to formulate, adopt and enforce adequate rules and policies to ensure quality care for patients.

27. Defendant Medical Center was negligent and careless in its care and treatment of services rendered to the Plaintiff in the following particulars:

a. In failing to select and retain competent physicians, specifically Defendant Zeliger;

b. In failing to oversee Defendant Zeliger;

c. In failing to provide adequate procedures and protocols to ensure that the information regarding the Plaintiff's neurological deficits were properly communicated and/or documented;

d. In continuing to have its agents, servants and/or employees provide post-operative care to Plaintiff without properly or timely diagnosing Plaintiff's neurological deficits and post-operative laceration of the median nerve;

e. In failing to properly monitor and to adequately chart the condition of the Plaintiff which would have assisted in making a diagnosis of a lacerated left median nerve post surgery; and

f. In failing to use reasonable care to ensure the competence of Defendant Zeliger and its other medical personnel to treat Plaintiff under the circumstances.

28. As a result of these breaches of duty, Plaintiff has suffered the following injuries and damages:

a. subsequent surgery for nerve grafts;

b. loss of sensation in her hand and fingers, specifically left index finger;

c. scarring;

d. laceration of several fascicles of the left median nerve in the area of the left carpal tunnel;

e. altered sensation involving the radial three and a half digits of the left hand;

f. pain in the are of the left hand;

g. atrophy of the left hand;

h. painful sensitivity of the left hand and fingers;

i. loss of strength to the Plaintiff's left hand and fingers;

j. numbness in the left hand and fingers;

k. depression; and

l. insomnia.

29. Because of these breaches of duty by Defendant Medical Center, Plaintiff has incurred medical, nursing and hospital expenses, past, present and future.

30. Because of these breaches of duty by Defendant Medical Center, Plaintiff has incurred lost wages, past, present and future.

31. Also because of these breaches of duty, Plaintiff has been deprived of the services, support, comfort, society, companionship, guidance and consortium of her husband and family.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff demands judgment against Defendant Medical Center in an amount in excess of the arbitrational limits of the Court of Common Pleas of Clearfield County, Pennsylvania.

JURY TRIAL DEMANDED.

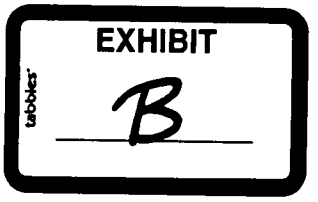
Re: Heitzenrater matter

Dear Ms. Segmiller:

I have comprehensively reviewed the medical records and the deposition testimonies (see Appendix A) relating to your client, Ms. Mary C Heitzenrater that have been provided to me. As a Board-Certified neurological surgeon (1985) and a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons (1991), I have been in the practice of neurological surgery for 23+ years. Accordingly, I am very familiar with, and therefore I believe qualified to discuss, the diagnosis and treatment of patients with a carpal tunnel syndrome, and any complication resulting from surgical management, thereof.

My professional opinions proffered within a reasonable degree of medical certainty are based entirely on those records and those studies that you have submitted for my review. These are as follows:

- Ms. Heitzenrater presented on April 18 2000 to Keith Zeliger, DO with electrodiagnostically-confirmed left-sided carpal tunnel syndrome, documented by Dr. Martin A Schaeffer.
- Ms. Heitzenrater elected to proceed with "surgical decompression of her median nerve" which was performed by Dr. Zeliger at Dubois Regional Medical Center on April 27, 2000.
- Postoperatively, Joseph E Imbriglia, MD of Western Pennsylvania Hand and Trauma Center assessed Ms. Heitzenrater. On September



14, 2000 Dr. Imbriglia noted complaints of "increasing numbness in [illegible] She also reports no sensation in the index [illegible] His impression was "s/p open carpal tunnel release with likely common digital nerve to the index finger laceration."

- Dr. Imbriglia performed an "Exploration of the median nerve, neurolysis, posterior interosseous nerve graft bypass interpositioning for the median nerve transected fibers" on Ms. Heitzenrater on September 29, 2000 at Shadyside Hospital. He identified at surgery "an area of a neuroma in continuity which appeared to be fascicles leading to the common digital nerve of the index finger."
- Ms. Heitzenrater was assessed by Richard Katz, MD of Pittsburgh PA on January 28, 2002 for "difficulties currently experienced with her left hand." He assessed "1. Post laceration of several fascicles of the L median nerve in the area of the L carpal tunnel occurring at the time of the 4/27/00 operative procedure; 2. Altered sensation involving the radial 3 ½ digits of the L hand related to # 1; 3. Pain experienced in the area of the L hand related to # 1." Over the course of the next 2 years Dr. Katz reported that Ms. Heitenrater "indicated that there has been no change in the condition of her L hand."
- In his deposition testimony taken on July 7, 2004 Dr. Zeliger discussed the technique he employs for surgery in carpal tunnel syndrome. While the technique as described is within the acceptable standard of care, his execution of that technique in his care of Ms. Heitzenrater which resulted in the neuroma of continuity failed to meet that acceptable standard.

I reserve the right to amend this report should further information become available that would warrant my doing so. All of the opinions herein, thus far, expressed have been stated within a reasonable degree of medical certainty.

Sincerely,

Bennett Blumenkopf, MD
